"How do you get to the World Cup Soccer Games in Germany? Use your head."

The Red Baron

So you are not playing for the World Cup. You can still use your head to get to the games. Use it to choose your airline. My Lufthansa German Airlines is the official airline to the 1974 World Cup Games in Germany.

And I, The Red Baron of Lufthansa German Airlines, promise you the same kind of wonderful service in first class that American travel agents voted the very best across the Atlantic. Delicious food, fine wines, the best beers in the world and my lovely people to make you comfortable and happy.

But maybe you are so serious about soccer that all you want is to get to the games as quickly as possible. Good. You should still fly my Lufthansa. I have the most nonstop flights to Germany. The only nonstops to Cologne. The only daily direct service to the games in Stuttgart. And daily direct flights to Munich where they'll play the finals.

So use your head to get to the World Cup Soccer Games-call your travel agent or Lufthansa.

We Are Here to Stay

Our game has been played in America for at least a century and during that time dedicated people have been striving to bring the game to acceptable major status in the American sports family. All too often these efforts appeared in vain . . . that is until now, and for that reason we are hopeful with what appears to be the breakthrough all of us must have felt at times was unattainable. Speculation on the future can be construed as dangerous, however, as we interpret the signposts of progress particularly in the last five years there can be no doubt that at this particular point in time we are not far away from realizing our long sought goal.

This progress is not just happenstance. It is due to the untiring efforts of the volunteers at the grass roots level, and the leadership provided by the national body supported by a capable, dedicated staff. Today it is not a question of if or when the game will arrive, but the speed with which it is moving throughout the entire country. For this reason alone it is incumbent upon those of us in the game to ensure an orderly progress for the benefit of all who want to enjoy it. The game no longer belongs to a select few, but to anyone and everyone who wants to join efforts with us in our mutual endeavor.

While there are countless events which changed the climate to one conducive to success, a few notable examples are worth mentioning here. During these past five plus years a much closer relationship and understanding has been developed between the national association and our educational institutions. This has been mutually beneficial for through this partnership more American youngsters have been exposed to and have taken up the game. The standard of coaching has improved immeasurably and with it the quality of performance of our college and high school players.

Our development program has stimulated new interest in state associations resulting in more youngsters playing the game at a much earlier age. The annual coaching clinics have produced a much needed supply of qualified coaches to cope with ever-increasing demands for this service from those newly exposed to the game.

The North American Soccer League's continued progress gives the young player a goal at which to shoot and from which he one day may derive his livelihood. The renewed interest of the American Soccer League has also added impetus to the game as it develops its program in new areas. The success of our Olympic team raised the hopes of all of us that at last we were on our way. The team's personnel was predominantly the product of our colleges testifying to the success of supporting programs.

Activating our national "A" and "under-23" teams is a very significant step forward and must not only be continued but accelerated both here and abroad.

This program must be supplemented also by activities involving national youth teams at the various age levels. Our investment in sending our team to Europe in March was one of the wisest decisions the national body could have made. It is only through this type of exchange that our standard of play will improve and the recognition of powerful football countries received.

While we are the governing body for the game, the expansion has caused many growing pains and has made those of us on the National Commission most cognizant that we cannot do the entire job alone. A scarcity of qualified leadership and funds must be addressed as demands on the national body increase in frequency. We have been most fortunate even with these limitations however, and our Association is getting recognition in areas which can and will be of significant help in the future. We have met with and been recognized by those in responsible positions in the F.I.F.A. We have board and executive committee membership in the United States Olympic Committee. Our strength and abilities are now being felt and recognized in the Concacaf.

The President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports has offered its assistance in helping us promote the game. The United States State Department has requested our appearance and opinions on international exchanges for the purpose of creating goodwill and a better understanding of our country through the game. Doors leading to top management in industry have been opened to us in our search for sponsorship. Heretofore big business did not even know we existed. National organizations like the Boy Scouts, YMCA, Boy's Clubs of America, National Parks and Recreation all are now aware of our purpose in promoting the game and interested in our programs as they develop. Our government is also interested in our activities and we will seek out the opportunity to testify before one or several of the congressional committees investigating amateur sports and national organizations responsibility, to be recognized as the governing body.

We report these new developments with great pride for it shows that our role today is vastly different from the past, since others outside of football are not looking for but demanding competent leadership in the game. The fact that we do have individuals who are representing us in these most sensitive areas is to me not only a great source of pride, but concrete evidence that we do have the expertise and competent leadership ability required to accomplish our objective.

Any organization is only as good as the people in it. If we can now husband our divergent views and channel our efforts for national, rather than local sovereignty and strength, the game and everyone in it will be beneficiary. To this end we must continue to direct our energies and those of my colleagues.

HAVE WE TURNED THE CORNER?

by Francisco Marcos, Editor

I suppose so many people have claimed so many times in the past few years, that yes, soccer has turned the corner, that my questioning and affirming it, might be redundant.

Yet, there are so many corners to turn in soccer that I doubt very much that we'll ever be satisfied with whatever progress we may claim.

For example, never before, at least not in recent years, has the USSFA yearbook been published early enough in the summer so as to provide valuable information about the season just completed. Never before has the book been available in newsstands, bookshops, or wherever else you might have obtained it. Like the sport that it portrays it has been something remote, available and informative, but not there where you want it.

Some would say that these are small points, and yet ignorance, lack of information—call it what you will remains one of the biggest problems facing American soccer. At times indeed, I get a litle paranoid and feel that there is a conspiracy to keep soccer away from the average American—out of his daily newspapers, radio and TV newscasts, etc. Don't try too hard to find out scores of NASL games in the average newspaper, or during the average eleven o'clock news. It just won't be there, and I no longer know who's wholly at fault!

I do know however, that many of the people in the game, for all the love, time, and money that they have put into it, must share the blame.

Some just don't care enough, and they should have no business being involved in a sport that means nothing to them. Others however, are ignorant, and they must be educated because, as the proverb goes, a little knowledge is dangerous.

A classical example of this ignorance was flagrantly demonstrated to me when reading many of the reports that reached my hands in compiling this publication. One writer, focusing on the New York Cosmos' 1972 NASL championship, talked about the Cosmos' "upcoming game against the Russian" team, a reference to the touring Moscow Dynamo, and "a game which many fans were billing as the championship of the world".

The mind boggles at such stupidity. I, for one, doubt that anyone was silly enough to refer to the game as such, but for a supposedly professional writer to describe it as such, is much more than enthusiasm for one's team (which is very commendable).

It simply shows how very little he knows about this great global game of ours.

I keep thinking that if I could afford it, I'd pack every American youngster now kicking a soccer ball, every parent, every coach and every referee, and last but not least, every aspiring soccer promoter, reporter, etc. into the biggest airplane that could be built and take them to the "meccas" of world soccer, and to Germany, during next summer's World Cup. This would do for starters. My whole point, if I must have one, is that—no, we have not yet turned the corner. There is simply too much left to be done, and I would suggest that we turn our efforts in the immediate future to soccer education.

If we don't do that, we are risking 'creating' a Frankenstein Monster which will ultimately destroy itself, so great is its strength—and the parallel to soccer certainly applies when we consider the phenomenal growth figures that are being reported all over the country.

BILL GRAHAM: A MEMORY

by Erwin Single

Bill Graham, newspaperman and soccer historian, as well as editor of at least a score of annual U.S. Soccer Guides, did not live to see the newest issue of the work he originated.

A native of Scotland and longtime resident of the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, Graham died on May 3, 1973 after several weeks of hospitalization. He had been soccer editor of the defunct Brooklyn Eagle and contributed to Soccer News and the Midwest Soccer News for many years. He was a valued production official for Beech Nut in addition to his labor of love, the annual compilation of soccer reports and league and cup statistics from all over the world with special emphasis on soccer in the United States.

He cherished the milestones in U.S. soccer history he managed to dig up at regular intervals for use in his Year Book. Many of the human interest items connected with the sport are still finding their way into the scripts of soccer writings today and into the promotional talks of after dinner speakers. Somewhere he came up with the fact that a crude form of the sport was already by the cavemen back in the stone age. Graham was also a walking encyclopedia on all international tours of foreign teams to America and American teams abroad. He was able to recall scores and the names of scorers at a moment's notice and possessed infinite patience in compiling his material for his annual record book, even if his farflung correspondents did not always live up to their prescribed deadline.

The United States Soccer Football Association, grateful for his services in maintaining a historical record of soccer in this country over a considerable span of years, presented Graham with a special citation several years ago. The Year Book is now being compiled and edited by the Promotion and Publicity Committee of the USSFA, headed by vice president John McKeon and Francisco Marcos.

This title did not come easily. It was attained through hard work, diligence and faithful service in many capacities with the oldest professional soccer league in the United States.

Time takes its toll upon all of us and so it was with reluctance that Mr. Alonso decided to "retire" in July, 1968.

In a simple statement at the ASL's annual meeting, Alonso said: "After 32 years of active participation to further the aims of soccer football, particularly in the American Soccer League, I am now requesting directors not to place my name as a nominee for office. During the 32 years—a long period of time—I have served the American Soccer League faithfully, diligently and competently. I love the sport and am keenly aware of its potentialities as the No. 1 sport in the world. As a result, therefore and reluctantly, I wish to be relieved of my duties as secretary-financial secretary, so that new faces, with new ideas, may be nominated."

Alonso, born Seytember 7, 1905, in Luanco, Asturias, Spain, started playing soccer with Scottish friends in 1911 in Anmoore, W. Va. Big game of the year, as Alonso reminisces, was the match between Scottish coal miners and Spanish zinc smelter workers and due to the rivalry between the two teams, a new referee had to be imported each year.

In 1919, he returned to Luanco with his parents where he attended the Institute of Commerce and assisted his professor in English classes. He also played for Marino Football Club. In 1922, Alonso journeyed to Havana, Cuba, playing for Madrid F.C., and then returned to the United States in 1924, when he and his brother, Hyneo, formed and played for the Canton (Ohio) Sporting Football Club. Both brothers next moved to Donora, Pa., where they formed the Donora Spanish Football Club and Benevolent Association, an organization which is still in existence.

Alonso, in 1927, went to Washington to study electrical engineering at Bliss Electrical School. While there, he played for Blick's Arcadians. The later club was a strong contender for championship honors of the Washington District League due to his influence in recruiting players from South America. In 1928, now employed by United Light & Power Co. (later Consolidated Edison), he played for Juventud Gallega. After a riotous game at Hawthorne Field, Brooklyn, he decided to hang up his playing shoes.

In 1936, Alonso became manager of State F.C. in the Brooklyn League; after a few years a referee; and then secretary of Brooklyn Hispano of the American Soccer League.

During World War II years, he was "loaned" to the National Defense Department, working on plan construction and operations in Maspeth, L.I., and Oak Ridge, Tenn. In 1945, he returned to Brooklyn Hispano and renewed a long and lasting friendship with owner Acky Zubillaga as secretary-treasurer.

In 1947, he attended his first American Soccer League meeting as an alternate delegate of Hispano and a long association with the pro American Soccer League.

Mr. Alonso has held many American Soccer League posts: For five years held many vice presidential posts; in 1955 became secretary upon the death of Frank Jenkinson, later business manager upon the resignation of Erno Schwarcz, thereby becoming secretary-treasurer-business manager; together with Jack Rottenberg, Jacky Hynes and John Boulos, formed the ASL Former Players Association; was a member of the U.S. Olympic and National Open Challenge Cup Committees; presented with two National Open Cup medals while with Brooklyn Hispano; received a citation from Henry L. Stimson, U.S. Secretary of War, for his meritorious service during World War II on the Manhattan District Project; beginning in 1950, travelled throughout the United States, Canada, Bermuda and Mexico with many foreign touring teams, and in 1967, became the first executive-secretary of the American Soccer League.

An insight into his exemplary character and a thoughtful gesture on Mr. Alonso's initiative, was the tedious task of collecting newspaper clippings of a foreign team touring under American Soccer League sponsorship and presenting it to the visitors as a goodwill memento. This so delighted visiting officials, that the albums have a prominent place in the board rooms of the respective world-famous soccer clubs.

Mr. and Mrs. Alonso (the former Angelina Montes, of Moundsville, W. Va.) in February, 1969, celebrated 35 years of happy married life. They have two children and three grandchildren.

And this is a partial life story of "Mr. American Soccer League."

DUNCAN DUFF

Duncan started his playing career while in Canada as a school boy. He continued playing with the Rover Soccer team, in 1928, in Los Angeles for Pasadena Los Angeles A.C. and later for the Magyar A.C. After a term in World War II, he was twice chosen all star right half back against San Francisco.

On his return he became manager of the M.A.C. and won the League championship in his first season as a manager. He became the delegate the following years and served as President. After that he was elected to the state commission where he acted as secretary and treasurer.

He succeeded Walter Hoffman as President of the commission and acted in that capacity for nine years continuously and worked as secretary-treasurer.

He also substituted for Mr. J. J. Barriskill in Mexico City during the USA  $_{
m VS.}$  Mexico game November 19th, 1960.

He had served as the longest President in Southern California history.

For the English, It was an American Disaster

Next year it's World Cup time again; the USA, again, will not be there; but in 1950 we were there. This is how John Thompson of London's Daily Mirror saw that historic 1-0 victory over England.

EVER since England's World Cup triumph in 1966 there has been ample scope to criticize the organization of the national team. But, compared with the circumstances of England's World Cup debut in 1950, England's preparations are almost perfect.

Consider that, in 1950, there was not only the perennial problem of securing the release of players from League clubs and the considerable disadvantage of a team manager who was not allowed to select his own team, but the FA had even arranged a simultaneous tour of Canada. And England's difficulties were only a part of Britain's cautious entry into this championship.

None of the four home countries had previously competed in the World Cup, partly because of the disputes with FIFA, but Stanley Rous, then secretary of the FA, had devoted a lot of effort to encourage them to participate in the first post-War tournament. The British Championship had been classified as a qualifying group with two qualifiers, but the Scottish FA refused to send a team to the finals in Brazil unless Scotland were British champions. A victory by England at Hampden Park prevented that, and so England became Britain's only representatives.

Such petty behaviour distracted attention from England's other problems. FIFA had demanded that each country name 22 players twenty-one days before the finals, and no competing country could deviate from this list. But the FA had included Stanley Matthews and Jim Taylor, of Fulham, in the party to tour Canada. Manchester United, due to tour the USA, had requested the release of Aston and Cockburn. Another handicap was that Neil Franklin, the automatic choice at center-half, left the World Cup squad for the financial benefits offered by Santa Fe of Colombia—a country not then a member of FIFA.

Enough talent remained in England party, however, for them to be rated favorites with Brazil, the hosts. Matthews and Taylor, though not available for the first game against Chile in Rio de Janeiro, were to join the squad in Rio later. Even without Matthews, there were also Stan Mortensen, Wilf Mannion, Tom Finney, Billy Wright, Alf Ramsey and Bert Williams. Unfortunately, the quality of the players was not matched by the management. A group of selectors chose the team which was then surrendered to the guidance of Walter Winterbottom, the FA's Director of Coaching. It was a complicated system of planning England's first attempt on the World Cup.

Nevertheless, goals by Mortensen and Mannion gave England a 2-0 victory. It was an adequate start, especially considering that the other two teams in England's group were USA and Spain. The USA team was rare proof that that country even played the game, and Spain had only beaten them 3-1. Even if the World Cup (which was arranged on a league basis) was unfamiliar to England, they could be reasonably confident of finishing top of their group and qualifying for the final four.

The next match, against the USA, was to take place at Belo Horizonte and the English party retired to the British-owned Morro Velho gold mine in the mountains, sixteen miles above the city. In such congenial surroundings, with the company and encouragement of the mine's British and Canadian employees, England were entitled to feel relaxed. Even Bill Jeffrey, the American's Scottish coach from Pennsylvania State University, expected his team to be defeated; they were allowed to stay up into the early hours of the morning before the match. The only unanswered question seemed to be the size of their defeat.

Yet it was in these happy conditions that the decision was taken which was to have such far reaching effects. Walter Winterbottom wanted to rest some of his players and give some of the other eleven a game, before choosing his strongest team for what was obviously going to be the big match against Spain. But the FA member in charge, the late Mr. Arthur Drewry,

A new World Cup hero: Gaetjens, whose goal humbled England in their first World Cup who was to become President of FIFA, did not agree with his team manager. He said in effect that the players would have an easy game against USA which would count as match practice.

So Winterbottom's professional judgment was over-ruled, because he had not been granted the sort of authority which was given to his successor Alf Ramsey. The same team that had played against Chile, apparently regarded as England's strongest side, was made to play against the weakest team in the competition.

By contrast, there was only one selector from the United States' FA, and his eleven players who had settled, either temporarily or permanently, in the US originated from six different countries. They included, as captain, Eddie McIlvenny, a Scottishborn player who had been given a free-transfer by Wrexham only 18 months previously and who later signed for Manchester United.

Unsuitable Ground

An early inspection of the narrow ground revealed that it was completely unsuitable for a World Cup match. Yet Winterbottom did not protest; after all England were supposed to be capable of beating most countries and certainly the USA, whom England had never met in a full international before. But he did refuse to allow his players to change in the minute, dimly-lit, rat-infested dressing rooms. Instead, the team changed at the Minas Athletic Club, ten minutes coach drive away.

But the ground was not merely cramped, but also rutted and stony, which was probably the reason why the American center-half, Colombo, wore strong leather gloves throughout the match! Yet for England it still should have been a fiesta. From the start it was one-way traffic towards Borghi's goal. Seconds after the kickoff, the England forwards surged through the American defense and Mullen was all set to score, when the ball bobbled and he lifted his shot over the bar. The players strolled back laughing.

Laughter became frustration, however, as the game continued. The pitch was small. Accurate passing was impossible on the bumpy surface. The genius of Mannion was reduced as the ball bounced around erratically. Even so, continuous effort kept England surging on to the American goal. But so often did the ball deflect unexpectedly that the skill of England's best players was annulled, and often their movements were reduced to the level of the opposing team.

The pressure began to tell, but chance after chance was struck over or past the goal. Then Tom Finney hit a post with goalkeeper Borghi sprawling well clear of the ball. And Mannion, with what on a reasonable surface would have been an easy goal, smashed the ball goalwards only to see it rebound far upfield, again from an upright.

The 20,000 crowd, jammed into the terraces of this tiny ground, could hardly believe that England were not sailing supremely through the game. And the hundreds of workers from the gold mine grew more and more anxious as the ball just would not go into the net. There were arguments with the local aficionados who, like the rest of Brazil, were apprehensive of the power of England and who were delighted to see the 100-1 outsiders still in the game.

America Scores

Then, of course, America scored, and the Reuters representative, the only man among eight pressmen with a phone link to Rio and the outside world, was able to transmit the extraordinary news that England were a goal down to a 'team I never knew played football'.

Bill Lyons, Joe Maca, Charly Colombo, Frank Borghi, Harry Keough, Walter Bahr, Bill Jeffreys, Frank Wallace, Ed McIllveny, Gino Periani, Joe Gaetjens, Clarkie Souza, Eddy Souza

The goal was appropriate to the whole bizarre situation. Left-half Bahr tried a shot, or rather a clearance out of danger. The ball was sailing straight to goalkeeper Bert Williams, when the Belgian-born centerforward, Gaetjens, trying to duck out of the way, got a stinging blow on his left ear, and the ball shot into the English net, at a point furthest from the goalkeeper.

The locals, understandably, went The England team smiled wild. sheepishly, and the only American journalist there, who was on holiday in Brazil with a brief to file if there was anything interesting, started to enquire where the nearest cable office was. The English players spent halftime standing up, or sitting on the grass listening to the excited chatter of the fans, and trying to sort themselves out. Quick directions from team manager Walter Winterbottom took Bentley to outside-right, Finney and Mortensen, the man the Rio crowd had named the Flying Bandit, into the middle. Things were bad but not yet desperate.

Loss Becomes Obvious

But although the only times that Bert Williams touched the ball were from long back passes or far flung clearances from the other end, in the gathering darkness it became obvious that England were going to lose. The longer the game went on the more composed the Americans became. After all, as one of the England players said afterwards: 'They are used to playing on Hackney Wick. The pitch suited them.' But there were other reasons; Colombo, of the leather gloves, was equal to Mortensen, and the Souza brothers started to play a victory march down the England right flank, despite Alf Ramsey and Billy Wright. Borghi, in goal, was playing well.

Bad luck still afflicted the England forward-line. Mullen crashed a shot against the upright. Mortensen hit the bar, the ball bounced down and an American fist punched it away for a throw-in. But no penalty was awarded. Then Mortensen broke clear only to be rugby-tackled to the ground, well inside the penalty area. This time a free-kick was given-outside the box. Still, Ramsey hit the ball hard and true towards the top corner of the net. For a moment England's supporters felt that perhaps, after all, England would salvage a draw. But Borghi, making the save of his life, clawed the ball away. And suddenly it was over. The referee's whistle confirmed what must rate as the most unexpected result in the history of international soccer.

It was soon dark. No sooner had the crowd gone, no sooner had the England players walked away in defeat, than the gates were locked, and the handful of English pressmen were left to fend for themselves with the telephone which had been handed over by the Reuters correspondent. For the next hour Maurice Smith of The People phoned back to Rio, for cabling to London, page after page of copy for the Daily Mail, Daily Express, News Chronicle and Allied Newspapers. For light he burnt newspapers. Many would do the same in England the next day. And as each sheet of typescript was read, so it was ignited to make sure that the next page could also be

The American journalist had gone to find his cable station, and the English journalists had subscribed dollars to help him pay the cost of the cable.

ATION

Meanwhile, the England party, less Mr. Drewry whose only comment had been, 'This leaves me speechless', and who had decided to stay in the town before returning to Rio, had climbed the sixteen lonely miles to the gold mines. There was sympathy for Walter Winterbottom. Ever a gentleman, he was as near to breaking-point as he could be. He shrugged his shoulders in complaint, asking: 'What can you say about a result like that? It just was not possible. If one of those shots had counted, it could have been a massacre. Now we have got to beat Spain to gain a play-off.'

Wilf Mannion commented: 'Bloody ridiculous. Can't we play them again tomorrow... on a proper pitch? Stan Mortensen, who as always had run himself into the ground, was slightly more objective as he said: 'When we beat Chile last Saturday I thought we were going to win the World Cup. It's made it just that little bit harder.'

Drewry Not Criticized

But there was never a word of criticism against Arthur Drewry, whose decision had allowed England's best team to be humiliated. There was no obvious reason for blaming him; if the USA had defeated England's best team, what would they have done to the reserves? Football rarely follows such logic however. There were good, reasons for Winterbottom's desire to change some of the team. Key players could have been rested for the harder matches later in the competition and there would have been no unnecessary risk of injuries. Also, what was the use of having reserves if they could not be used; and what better opportunity to give them match practice than against the USA. Perhaps they too would have been unable to prevent England's defeat; but perhaps also they would have been more determined from the beginning, if they had been playing for their places in the team.

Still, the defeat was irrevocable. All that could be done to mitigate it was to beat Spain the following Sunday. But, as they tried to relax amidst the music, the food, and the drink supplied by hospitable British employees of the gold mine, the overall feeling was one of despair. To have tried so hard, to have come so far, to be among, and hope to defeat the best footballers in the world, made the international ridicule harder to bear. Nor was it only the players who had to endure the humiliation; England's supporters at the mine would have to remain among the local people after the England team had returned home.

Only a convincing victory over Spain could have repaired the damage to England's pride and prestige. But on the Sunday and despite four changes -including Matthews-England lost to a second-half goal by Zarra. England could claim to have been unlucky for an apparently good Jackie Milburn goal was ruled offside. Yet it was not a convincing excuse for the whole purpose of thorough organization is to avoid having to rely on luck. That was the lesson England should have learnt from their disastrous World Cup debut. But further humiliation -by the Hungarians-and three more World Cup failures occurred before England finally understood.

New Cities Emerge as Cup Winners

Compiled by Alex Yaremko

Three new clubs from three new geographic centers won the three USSFA cups in 1973. The new soccer champions and national finalists are:

OPEN CUP-L. A. Maccabees over Cleveland Inter AMATEUR CUP-Phila. Inter over St. Jose Cavaliers JUNIOR CUP-Baltimore St. Elizabeth over L. A. Sparta

Two monopolies were snapped. In the Open Cup, this was the first time that a club from neither the New York-based German-American League nor Philadelphia from the American Soccer League represented the East in the national finals in the past 15 years, and only the third time that this coveted challenge trophy went to the West.

In the Junior Cup competition, the St. Louis stronghold was also broken, to give the East its third title since 1959, and the first in the past six years. California teams represented the West this year in all three cup categories.

Teams from the following cities won national cup championships:

	OPEN CUP	AMATEUR CUP	JUNIOR CUP
1959	San Pedro	St. Louis	New York
1960	Philadelphia	St. Louis	St. Louis
1961	Philadelphia	St. Louis	San Francisco
1962	New York	Detroit	St. Louis
1963	Philadelphia	Rochester	St. Louis
1964	Los Angeles	Chicago	St. Louis
1965	New York	Philadelphia	St. Louis
1966	Philadelphia	Chicago	St. Louis
1967	New York	Hartford	Philadelphia
1968	New York	Chicago	St. Louis
1969	New York	Washington	St. Louis
1970	Elizabeth	Chicago	St. Louis
1971	New York	St. Louis	St. Louis
1972	Elizabeth	St. Louis	St. Louis
1973	Los Angeles	Philadelphia	Baltimore

Note that in the past 15 years Philadelphia is the only city to have won cups in all three categories. St. Louis clubs, however, captured the most cups. 16, followed by Philadelphia and New York City with 7 cups each.

In tabulating by the Olympic 5-3-1 point valuation system for the three cup levels, New York City leads with 31 points, followed by Philadelphia with 27 and St. Louis with 26. Next in order are Los Angeles 15, Chicago 12 and Elizabeth 10.

Finally, ethnically speaking, in the top Open Cup competition, Ukrainian clubs were victorious 5 times, the Germans 4 times and the Greeks 3 times.

Change the Scene: Maccabee for the West

by John O. Best

I T WAS, warm, sunny and a clear beautiful day in Los Angeles on June 10th. A day for relaxation, picnics, the beach or just enjoying a Sunday with the family. For many in the L.A. area it was just that, but not for those supporters of the Maccabee S.C. team, nor for the visiting eleven representing Cleveland's pride, the Inter-Italian S.C.

The divisional finalists were to meet in the Grand Final of the U.S. Open Cup that afternoon. The Western Champion and the Eastern Champion meeting for the right and honor to hold and defend the oldest soccer trophy in the United States.

This trophy, the symbol of soccer supremacy, was given to this country by Sir Thomas Dewar of Scotland in 1914. Held in possession by some of the greatest teams developed on these shores . . . Bethlehem Steel of Pennsylvania; Ponta Delgada of Massachusetts; Greek-Americans of New York; Kutis of St. Louis; the Los Angeles Kickers and last year's champion the Elizabeth Sport Clubs of New Jersey.

The long road to the grand finals had now reached the summit. The glory was to be to the victor, but the hard climb to the peak had its rewards and would always remind the runner-up of their outstanding and successful run for the cup.

The road for Inter had been blocked all the way by opponents who were strong and determined to win and be the finalist. At home in Ohio, the Ukrainian Americans and Croatian Zagreb, who knew the Inter eleven as well as they knew themselves, were determined to be the victors—yet Inter overcame their resistance and moved on to the first round proper to defeat Inter-Hope of Rochester.

Each game became more of a challenge, as it should. Canonsburg of Pittsburgh and then the Philadelphia Ukrainians. The later being a club with a great history—winning the Dewar Cup in 1960, 1961 and repeated again in 1966.

However, 1973 was not the Philadelphia team's year—Inter won 3-0, to go on to the divisional final against the awesome Greek Americans of New York City. Three time champions, from 1967 through 1969, once again making a serious run for the cup. A great team with confidence and ability, with the desire to win. As Intermade believers out of the Ukrainians in Philadelphia, so they did with the Greeks in New York. For, when the final whistle blew, the score was 3-1 Inter and they were on to the Grand Final.

A great record had been achieved. Twenty three goals scored and but five given up in Cup play. An average of 3.8 goals scored and a mere .8 goals scored against this excellent defense.

Finalist. Having defeated four excellent opponents in the California South drawing, they looked forward to the inter-state play. First it was Croatia S.C., then St. Stephens and the Los Angeles Gauchos before meeting the San Pedro Yugoslav Americans in the state finals.

The same San Pedro team, who were finalists in 1971 and again in 1972. When the game ended the Maccabee team moved on by virtue of a 1-0 victory to meet the San Jose Portuguese in the divisional semi-finals. Meanwhile the Chicago Croatian's were moving toward the divisional final with victories over the Bravarian S.C. of Milwaukee and the Denver Kickers of Colorado.

Maccabee 2-San Jose 0, was the result of their game, and a week later the Chicago eleven was to feel the sting of defeat by a score of 1-0. Not noted for scoring, with only six goals in their last five cup games, but a stonewall on defense was this grand finalist from the West. No one in those final five games dented the nets against this superior team.

Here was the classic contest. The unstoppable offense—Inter-Italian of Cleveland with a 3.8 goal scored average, versus the unmovable defense—Maccabee of Los Angeles, with a zero goal scored against average in their final five cup contests.

The match was one of the finest games played in the West in a long time. Inter-Italian began attacking right from the opening whistle, playing delightful football at a very fast pace. However, it was Maccabee who hit the net first. A penalty shot awarded for a tripping foul in the 13th minute of the game. Inter evened the score during a concentrated attack at the 35th minute, but Maccabee, playing their fine defensive game, broke away and scored their second goal at the 41 minute mark. Thus ended the first half, a real scorcher, with Maccabee leading 2-1.

Thirty minutes into the second half, Inter tied up the game with a lovely goal and this score held until the final whistle despite the fact that the Inter team were playing with only ten men, one player having been ejected early in the second half of play. Overtime, and at the eight minute mark, Jim McMillan the Inter center forward secured the go-ahead goal and it looked like it was all over for the Los Angeles team. Less than two minutes later. Maccabee's substitute Schnitman put the ball in the Inter net and the score was once again tied. This gave the Maccabee new life and they dominated the balance of the overtime period, scoring two more goals, one by Schnitman and the other by UCLA star Fesseha Emanuel.

Thus it ended. Maccabee 5, Inter Italian 3. The Dewar Cup has found a new home for 1973. Once again it has moved to the Far West. Not since 1964 has it been past the Mississippi River, but now it resides with a well deserved champion, and it may be there for a long time to come.

YOUR POINT OF VIEW ABOUT ALITALIA...

MAY NEED OPENING UP TO A WORLD SIZE.

Some people think we only go to Italy.

That was some twenty years ago. Then we made straight for the top, growing faster than most international airlines.

Doubled our all-jet fleet in only ten years. Carrying up to 21,500 passengers a day. Jumping from number eleven to the sixth largest international airline*

Once a one-country airline, we now take in over 60 countries. And we fly to more than 100 cities all over the world.

Some of them may be outside your horizon.

They are all within ours.

It's Philly Inter for the East

The second oldest cup tournament in United States Soccer, initiated in 1923-24, with the Fleisher's Yarn team crowned the National Champion, has now developed into one of the largest national sport contests in this country. Forty-nine years after its birth, one hundred and fifty-six clubs entered this single-elimination contest to decide this years champion.

In the New England area, the Hartford Italians, representing the Connecticut State Association, played the Association Academica of Fall River, Massachusetts in Hartford with the Fall River team winning by the score of 3-2.

Association entered the second round proper to meet Peabody Academica, who had defeated Hellenic of New Hampshire (4-1) and White Plains of Southern New York (4-3). The game was played in Salem, Massachusetts and when the final whistle blew it was a win for Peabody, defeating Association Academica four goals to nil.

This win placed Peabody in the Eastern Divisional Finals to meet the Philadelphia Inter team on the New England grounds.

Philadelphia Inter, a mixture of amateur stars, a future college All-American in John Brozzi, and a recent high school All-American in Elston Seale, led the Eastern Pennsylvania State Champions to defeat the German-American Kickers of Trenton, New Jersey (4-0), and inched by Dnipro of Baltimore (4-3), who had previously defeated the Pan-American Union team of Washington D.C. by the score of 1-0.

Philadelphia Inter then met their greatest challenge when the Inter-Italian Club of Cleveland, Ohio met them in the second round proper. This Ohio powerhouse, which won the East in the National Challenge Cup and took runner-up honors in that competition, reached the Philadelphia game by defeating Colo-Colo of Rochester, New York (9-3) and the Carpathia Kickers of Detroit 1-0.

The game was played in Philadelphia with Seale, this year's high school All-American scoring two goals and leading the home team to a 4-2 victory over the Italians. This set the stage for the Eastern Divisional Finals, with the victor entering into the National Grand Final. Philadelphia traveled up to Massachusetts and when the game ended they proved they were to represent the East by defeating Peabody six goals to two.

Meanwhile in the West, where distances and unpredictable weather are much the determining factors as to who will emerge as the Western Champion, the Denver Kickers were making a strong bid to be that team. However, 1972-73 was not to be their year, for when they flew to Chicago they met a juggernaught in the home club, Chicago Kickers. The same Kickers, who were the National Amateur Champions in 1966 and 1970, had defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 3-1 in overtime and were primed to go all the way once again. They sent the Denver team home with a 6-1 loss.

Out of the toughest State Association play emerged the defending 1972 Champion, St. Louis Busch. Once again strong, young and experienced, they traveled up to Chicago to meet the Kickers in the Divisional Semi-Finals. The result was there would be a new champion this year. St. Louis Busch was dethroned by the Kickers 3-0.

In the Far West it was the San Jose Grenadiers waiting and watching the battles in the great Mid-West for they would meet the eventual victor of that area in the Western Divisional Championship. The Grenadiers, representing Northern California had reached that position by eliminating D.S.V. Danubia, from California South 7-0, after defeating Heidelberg of Seattle, Washington by the narrowest of scores (1-0).

So the die was cast—the Kickers of Chicago and the Grenadiers of San Jose would meet for the Far West Championship, with the winner meeting Philadelphia Inter in Philadelphia.

The San Jose team flew into Chicago to meet the Kickers. They were well rested but the long wait for the Mid-West play downs left them on edge. Chicago's team was fresh from three successive victories over the Brewers, the Denver Kickers and the St. Louis eleven.

The game was one which emphasized the defense of both teams. Chicago scored and led 1-0 going into the later part of the second half. Time was running out for San Jose but with 8 minutes left in the game the California team scored the tieing goal and one minute later at the 83 minute of the game the tie breaker went into the nets off a Grenadier foot. A few minutes later the game ended 2-1 in favor of San Jose; the Champions of the West-On to Philadelphia for the Grand Final.

Veterans Stadium

Sunday, July 1st, Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium. One of the most modern and beautiful, fully adaptive sports stadiums in the world. Home of the Philadelphia Phillies (major league baseball); Philadelphia Eagles (major league football); and the Philadelphia Atoms (major league soccer). The site of the '73 Grand Final.

The opening kick off took place in the late Sunday afternoon, the teams were equal and spent the initial part of the first half feeling each other out. The play was clean and crisp and no one had an advantage when at the 44th minute Dale Russell the young black college player from Bermuda passed the ball on to Hecto Nietto and it was in for the initial score.

San Jose struck back in the second half and an outstanding save by the Philadelphia Inter goalkeeper prevented the tie and the momentum so necessary for victory. At the 60 minute Elston Seale, the high school All-American from Columbia High in New Jersey took a throw-in in the offensive half of the field. It was misjudged by the Grenadier's goalkeeper, landed at the feet of Dale Russell and it was now Inter 2-Grenadiers 0. This was the winner for it changed the pace of the game and San Jose was to be the runner-up. At the 80th minute Nietto scored again for his second goal, assisted by Seale.

Final score 3-0 favor Philadelphia and a true worthy champion for 1973.

Surprise: It's Baltimore, Not St. Louis

by Donald Greer, Commissioner National Junior Cup Competition

FROM Massachusetts to Southern California, from Florida to the state of Washington, a record number of 224 junior teams representing 25 different State Associations entered this years competition. Games were played all the way from the fall in the North Western part of New York through the Grand Finals that took place in June in Dallas, Texas.

Teams battled through snow, mud and yet in order to play their games, play them they did. In the Eastern Region the St. Elizabeth Soccer Club was the champion and represented Maryland in the finals of the Mid-Western Region. The Seco Soccer Club of St. Louis defeated a surprising finalist, the Husker Soccer Club of Omaha, Nebraska, and went for their third straight National Junior championship. Coach Joe Vasquez's team had continued with an amazing record in all competition of winning 19 games, losing none, having scored 75 goals, against 13 for their opponents which is truly a remarkable feat.

In the Southern Region after North Texas had disposed of the Georgia champion, the Texas boys traveled to Jacksonville, Florida and were taken by surprise by the number of people Coach George Kennedy had at the airport to meet them. The game for the Southern championship was played in the Gator Bowl and much to the disappointment of the northern Florida fans was won by the North Texas boys 2-0.

In the far West, Sparta of San Diego with Manager Jeff Wilkin and Coach George Logan, had little trouble turning back Arizona United and the Northern California champion, Los Aguilas at Balboa Stadium in San Diego. The San Diego boys will be trying for the second year to see if they can stop the reign of the St. Louis Seco team in the National competition.

They came to Dallas; from the East, the Mid-West and the Far West. The Southern Regional Champion was at home and the host to the National Final.

The Cotton Bowl was the site, the Dallas public the fans and the sun the factor.

The Texas sun, beating down on the astro-turf of the Cotton Bowl reached temperatures of 95 to 100 degrees. The strength and endurance of the boys' would be taxed.

St. Louis drew Baltimore in the opening game and the St. Elizabeth's team reversed last year's decision by defeating the defending champion 2 to 0.

In the second game San Diego narrowly edged a determined home town favorite by a single goal, 2-1.

This set the stage for Saturday's consolation game between American International of Dallas and Seco of St. Louis. The defending champs were determined and out-scored the locals by 9-1.

The finals followed and an excellent game developed with the new champion St. Elizabeth edging out Sparta of San Diego 3-2.

St. Louis displayed their traditional fine techniques in ball handling and control, while Baltimore and San Diego showed outstanding physical fitness and stamina under devastating temperatures. While San Diego and Baltimore were pretty evenly matched in skill and endurance, the consistency of play as well as alertness in the final game allowed the eastern champion to edge out the Spartans from the West Coast. Even though the home-town boys may be disappointed, their enthusiasm, quickness and hustle for the ball are promising and showed us one thing: Watch out for Northern Texas in the next few years!

The U.S. Jr. Challenge Cup Trophy was presented by Don Greer, Cup Chairman and 5th Vice-President, Youth, USSFA, to the 1973 championship team, St. Elizabeth's Soccer Club of Baltimore, Maryland, following the conclusion of the final game.

AMERICA'S LARGEST INDEPENDENT YOUTH SOCCER ORGANIZATION

Youth Must Be Heard

THE Californiabased American Youth Soccer Organization completed its 1972-73 season in March with the state championship finals at El Camino College before well over 2,000 fans.

It all started in September of last year when 1,258 teams kicked off regular regional league play in three age divisions.

For the first time in AYSO history, girls soccer broke into the limelight as the Los Angeles Times and other major news media provided heavy coverage. Of the 94 regional champions competing in the state finals, 22 were girls teams.

Total registration for the 1972-73 season was nearly 24,000, including coaches, referees and executives in 27 regions.

Charter regions already established for the 1973-74 season number 42 and nearly 40,000 registered members are projected.

AYSO's executive membership totals 57; additionally, 5 advisors are responsible for the organization's destiny.

The Board of Directors are: Hans F. W. Stierle, president; Ron Ricklefs, executive vice president; Bill Wolstencroft, vice president of operations; Ron Littlefair, vice president of development; Dick Smisek, vice president of organization; Larry Littleton, secretary; and Frank Pisciotta, treasurer.

Qualifying Groups

Group One

WEST GERMANY and Morocco qualified for the semi-finals, West Germany without exerting themselves, the Moroccans with singular lack of conviction. In front of 60,000 spectators at the Olympic Stadium, the Germans accounted for Malaysia in their opening match by three goals to nil, although neither side had scored at half-time. West Germany went on to beat Morocco 3-0, two of the goals coming from the penalty spot and the boot of Nickel: then the United States 7-0, with Nickel scoring a further three goals.

The Moroccans meanwhile had to settle for a goalless draw against the USA, who promptly went down 3-0 to Malaysia, who then needed only a draw against the North Africans to qualify in their place. Unfortunately, some bad defensive errors cost them two quick goals, Morocco led 4-0 at half-time, and ran out winners by 6-0. This was a bitter blow for the Malaysians, who had fine players in their captain Chadran, Soh Chin in midfield and Salleh darting from wing to wing. Ironically their only weak link was Wong Kam in goal, the one position in which the Americans could compete with their opponents-and significantly enough their keeper, Ivanov, was injured when the United States lost heavily to West Germany.

Group Two

The Soviet Union made extraordinarily heavy weather against largely mediocre opposition, for they succeeded in beating Burma and the Sudan each by only one goal, in spite of fielding a good number of the players who had taken Russia to the final of the European professional championship.

Indeed the Sudanese, who pulled back from 2-0 to 2-1 in the Olympic Stadium, had the Russians on the run halfway through the second-half, and with steadier shooting, could have produced a sensation. Narrelding, who scored their goal, and Bushara, were both extremely skillful on the ball, and their combination play with Magneldi and Gafard was an absolute delight.

Burma, plucky in defense, lacked a real goalscorer to trouble any of their opponents. Than Soe and Aug Moe, their scorers against Sudan, were perhaps their most consistent players.

Russia took first place in the group by beating Mexico 4-1, with three exciting goals from Blohin, drafted into the forward line to add to their striking power. But Mexico still qualified by virtue of their two 1-0 victories over Burma and the Sudan, not the sort of form to suggest that they could progress much further.

Group Three

The tightest of the three groups was won without difficulty by Hungary, defending the Olympic title they secured in Tokyo and retained in Mexico City. In the first match they beat Iran, the Asian champions, 5-0 with the help of a hat-trick from Ede Dunai while Denmark had to struggle to beat Brazil 3-2, after being a goal down in the second-half.

When Hungary could only draw 2-2 with the Brazilians, squandering a half-time lead with a stupid defensive error, it seemed Denmark had the initiative. But the Hungarians, thanks to a further brace of goals from Dunai, won 2-0 at Augusburg, gaining revenge for their defeat in the 1960 tournament at Rome.

Denmark comfortably qualified in second place, beating Iran 4-0, and it was only in their final match that the Asians, who had done so well in the mini World Cup last summer, showed their true potential by beating Brazil with the only goal of the match.

For the Brazilians, it was a wretched potential champions, winning their three matches. In the first, they scored five times against Colombia (5-1), three from Gadocha and two from Deyna; in the second, four against Ghana, including two more from Deyna, and the others from Gadocha and the famous Lubanski; and in the third they upset the fancied East Germany side, winning 2-1 at Nuremburg.

However, the East Germans qualified comfortably enough with a similar 4-0 win over Ghana, and an even easier win over Colombia by 6-1, 4-1 tournament, especially after so much optimism and four months of intense preparation for their players. Some of them, notably their two stars, Osmar and Washington, complained of being "over-prepared", and this may have been the answer.

Group Four

A group of goalscorers, with 28 goals in all in only six matches. Poland, already, were showing the form of at half-time. Peter Ducke, even as a veteran still worth a place in the national side, scored a particularly fine goal.

The Colombians did end with a 2-1 victory over Ghana, but the South Americans never made any real impact. Their team was young and enthusiastic, but lacked tactical experience. However, Espinosa, Montano and Moncada could make their presence felt at a higher international level in two or three years time.

The Ghanians, pleased enough to qualify in a difficult African group, did not deserve the heavy defeats they suffered, particularly against East Germany, when they dominated the game for long periods. But the absence of a confident goalscorer was their undoing, although Samtah and Abrahaim Sunday tried hard in midfield to get the attack going.

Semi-Final Group A

There was no hint of the defeat shortly to come Hungary's way as they accounted for East Germany, West Germany and Mexico to reach their third successive final. Hungary played their best match so far against the East Germans, winning 2-0 at Passau. Both their goals were made by Lajos Kocsis-no relation to his famous predecessor-the first with a clever pass to Toth who, in his turn, fed Antal Dunai who was just onside when Toth released the ball. Dunai scored with a marvelous reverse chip on the turn that completely surprised Croy, and the East German keeper had no chance at all when the second goal came. Again Kocsis passed to Toth, who let fly with a tremendous shot.

West Germany, meanwhile, could do no better than draw 1-1 with Mexico, and it was little surprise when they, too, were beaten by Hungary—the score in this match, 4-1. Both the Dunai brothers, Ede and Antal, scored, and two more goals came in the closing minutes from the head of Ku as the German keeper Weinhold revealed his uncertainty in the air.

Hungary made certain of at least the silver medal with a 2-0 win over Mexico, Antal Dunai getting the first, and Kocsis, who came on as a secondhalf substitute, the second.

Which left the two Germanys, East and West, to fight for the right to contest the third place match. East Germany had taken a psychological advantage by crushing Mexico 7-0, including a hat-trick from Sparwasser, and sure enough they took an early lead through Pommerenke in front of an 80,000 crowd at Augsburg. The East Germans, with three dangerous shots, including the one that scored, in the first quarter of an hour, looked the better side, until Uli Hoeness hit a remarkable equalizer. For once escaping the attentions of Ganzera, he struck a cross full on the volley with his right foot into the top corner of the net. The East Germans regained the lead soon after half-time when Sparwasser headed on for Streich, in turn, to head a goal. Still West Germany came back, with a headed goal of their own from Bitz's dangerous cross, but in the 71st minute Vogel, who had played so well against England at Wembley a couple of years ago, headed the winner from Ducke's center.

Semi-Final Group B

Poland, by now gathering momentum, dropped an unexpected point against Denmark, who were greatly assisted by what seemed a tactical error on the Polish bench-the substitution of Szoltysik in the 66th minute, who at that stage seemed the best player on the field. Denmark even took the lead shortly before the interval, Hansen taking advantage of the confusion in the Poles' defense caused by Nygaard's tremendous free-kick. But when the equalizer came, it was a goal of rare character, devised by Szoltysik, carved out by Lubanksi, who beat two defenders and gave Deyna a chance he simply could not miss.

Russia, meanwhile, accounted for Morocco 3-0, one of their goals coming from a substitute, Eliseev, who scored with his very first kick; and for a long time they seemed likely to beat Poland, scoring through Blohin early in the match. However, this time Szoltysik had an impact in reverse: it was his entry into the match in the 71st minute that led to Poland being awarded a penalty when he was tripped in the air. Despite an acrobatic leap by Rudakanov, Deyna equalized, and three minutes from the end Szoltysik crowned a memorable appearance by scoring the winner.

Denmark beat Morocco 3-1 to keep their hopes of the gold alive, but they came badly unstuck against the Soviet Union, conceding two goals, scored by Kolotov and Semenov, in the first eight minutes. The Danish defense played much too square, and fell further behind in the second-half, when Blohin and Szabo, with a spectacular volley, made the final score 4-0.

Match for Third Place

The rules of the competition provided only for extra time in the event of a draw, and no penalty kicks, which led one to inquire if there was, in fact, any point in a match for the bronze medals at all. At any rate the game ended at 2-2 after extra time, with both teams taking a medal. East Germany had much the better of the opening stages, scoring from a penalty in the 33rd minute when Kaplichny handled; but with Rudakov in magnificent form, Russia rallied from two goals down to save the game.

Final

At half-time it seemed that Antal Dunai would create a record by winning his third consecutive gold medal in an Olympic final; for Hungary led 1-0 with a goal from Varadi scored just before the interval from the acutest of angles. But Poland, to their undying credit, kept their heads and gradually wore down the Hungarian defense. With Lubanski striding everywhere to make the breaks, Deyna quickly equalized, and was given another chance to score 12 minutes from the end. As Pancsis covered quickly, the chance seemed lost, but an incredible confusion led to Balint miskicking and the ball running loose to Deyna barely five yards from the line. Never before has such a simple shot proved worthy of gold.

A Closer Look

by Bob Guelker, Head Coach

POR THE first time in the history of the U.S.A. Olympic Soccer team, the squad qualified and earned the final round of the Olympic competition which was held in Munich 1972. The only other time the U.S.A. team participated in the final round was in 1956 when only ten countries had entered the competition due to international conflicts.

However, for the 1972 Games, 84 countries entered the soccer phase of the spectacular games. In order to become one of the final 16 qualifiers, the U.S.A. team had to compete in two qualifying zone rounds, and the results of these are included at the end of this report for information and record purposes.

While we were disappointed in the results of the games in Munich, the most important factor was surviving 11 preliminary games and qualifying for Munich to become one of 16 from the original entry of 84 countries.

In Munich the 16 teams were grouped into four groups of four, and we were grouped with host West Germany, Morocco, and Malaysia. Morocco was our first opponent. Their roster included six (6) players who represented their country in the 1970 World Cup and held Germany to a 2-1 score. In this match our defense was flawless and Mike Ivanow was spectacular in goal. As a consequence, we played to a scoreless draw and received much worldwide acclaim. This result was our highlight in Munich, especially when Morocco went on to qualify for the final eight. Next, we played Malaysia, a small but very quick and fast team. Unfortunately we played the worst game of all our official games since we had been together and lost 3-0. Malaysia's 1-2 touch and movement off the ball was superb. In essence they were "up", and we seemed to play as individuals with practically all players having a bad game at the same time.

In the meantime, West Germany had beaten Morocco and Malaysia by 3-0 scores. Because German fans knew the personnel of the West Germany team, they expected more of them. Consequently, the host team was boord in both of their wins. Their manager appealed to the public in the newspapers prior to our game to cheer the effort of the German team. To win them over, he was of the opinion he had to win from us by a big score. Thus, in our last game, we lost to West Germany 7-0 on what appeared to be a mismatch before approximately 66,000 fans. Sixteen of the 19 man roster were members of First Division professional teams, including winger Hoernes of Bayern-Munich and Germany's World Cup team.

The scores of our group were as follows:

West Germany	3	Morocco	0
West Germany	3	Malaysia	0
West Germany	7	U.S.A.	0

West Germany and Morocco qualified for the final eight which were broken down into two groups of four.

Poland defeated Hungary for the Gold Medal and Russia and West Germany played to a draw for third place. Because both teams would receive medals in the event of a tie after overtime play between Russia and East Germany was a farce throughout the whole overtime.

In general, the German fans were a fine spectator group, they praised good play and booed poor effort for everyone. On many occasions the crowds were in excess of 70,000. The stadium is one of the finest in the world, and the grounds crew did an outstanding job in making the transition from track to soccer.

The management of soccer was well organized, and they provided adequate training facilities and a plentiful supply of balls. In the official pre-tournament meeting every effort was made to make it very clear that no unsportsmanlike conduct nor rough tactics would be permitted. Special reference was made to disputing decisions, delaying free kicks, and dangerous play. I belive these efforts were responsible for much of the clean play and good soccer that resulted.

This was quite an experience to be among the top 16 amateur powers in the world. The one difficulty, as I see it, is a need for a better definition of an amateur. We were playing against players who are playing in the top professional league in their country. In addition, their national teams go on extended tours to prepare themselves as they are using the Olympic games as a showcase for their country. Under present conditions, there is little hope to win an Olympic medal.

As I see it, if we hope to win a medal, we must start to organize the team immediately using some of the present players as a nucleus. The team should be assembled for a minimum of two weeks each summer playing 3-4 games, and then make a final thrust of preparation the last year before the games. It would be helpful, if we could place young prospects in the NASL on amateur forms to gain the kind of experience, however, this presents a problem for future players with collegiate eligibility left. Other countries do not have this problem. They see to it that their good young prospects are playing the pro-league on an amateur contract.

Regarding the technical aspects of play, most of the teams utilize some form of a 4-3-3 with three midfield players and a modified sweeper. Much emphasis is placed on bringing 7-8 players back on defense. In making the transition to attack, there may be a slow buildup in midfield in order to get 7-8 players on the attack.

I would like to commend all those who helped provide training for the Olympic team, all the players who helped make history with their fine efforts, and to Julie Menendez for an outstanding job as assistant coach and to Gene Edwards our most highly qual-

World Cup '74: For USA It's '78

MEXICO, with a clean sweep of their games against Canada and the United States, have won their way to the second preliminary round of the World Cup in the CONCAAF region.

The series opened with Canada playing the United States in St. John's, Newfoundland. With a capacity crowd of 8,000 on hand in the tiny stadium, Canada quickly went ahead on a goal by Buzz Parsons and by the 63rd minute had increased their lead to 3-0 on goals by Bruce Twamley and Glen Johnson.

Three minutes after Johnson's spectacular goal with an overhead kick, Willie Roy headed the United States back into the game, and then in the 88th minute Rudy Getzinger squeezed the ball between goalkeeper Dick Howard and the post to make it 3-2. The Canadians held onto their lead for the final two minutes to send the noisy but highly enthusiastic crowd home happy.

Experience

Four days later Canada met Mexico in Toronto and in a highly exciting contest were beaten by one goal to nil. Canada more than held their own before a crowd of 11.000 and with a little more experience and steadiness in front of goal must surely have had the game won in the first half. As it was it took the Mexicans until the 63rd minute before they scored. The goal came with the Mexicans breaking quickly from a corner to Canada and Juan Borbolla finished it off with a low cross shot from the left wing which went just inside the far post.

Baltimore was the next stop for the Canadians and as in Newfoundland they took an early lead with Ike Mackay scoring. A strengthened United States team hit back to take the lead through Willie Roy and Barry Barto before Canada got a well deserved equalizer nine minutes from the end through Jim Douglas. The game was watched by a meager crowd of 3,500.

From Baltimore it was on to Mexico for the United States while Canada traveled to Guatemala City for an international against Guatemala. Both games were played on the same day, with the Mexicans winning the all important one in Aztec Stadium by three goals to one. Mexico had little trouble in establishing a 3-0 lead on goals by Cesareo Victorino, Fernando Bustos and Enrique Borja before the United States got on the scoreboard in the 78th minute with Willie Roy scoring.

With Mexico having won both their games in the competition so far, Canada required a win in Mexico City three days later to stand any chance of qualifying, and this was a tall order when you consider that much more experienced teams than Canada could do little more than draw in Mexico.

Controversial

A goal from Mexico's talented midfield player Victorino in the 21st minute soon made Canada's task even more difficult, this goal closely resembled Geoff Hurst's controversial goal in the 1966 World Cup Final and on this occasion the Canadians were so certain that it had not crossed the line that they played on. The referee, Mr. Koetsier of the Netherlands Antilles, thought otherwise and Mexico were one up.

But the Canadians fought back and following a combined move, Brian Robinson drilled a fine 25 yard drive into the top right hand corner of the net to give Mexico's veteran goalkeeper Ignacio Calderon no chance.

With the score tied at half time, and the Canadians playing well, an upset looked in the making, but once again experience proved to be the determining factor, just as it was in the first game.

One minute after half time the Mexicans were awarded a free kick on the edge of the Canadian penalty area to the right and Fernando Bustos, who had an outstanding game for Mexico, curled the ball through a chink in the Canadian wall to make it 2-1. Undaunted the Canadians came back again and Glen Johnson hit the inside of an upright, while in the dying minutes Tony Lecce had a certain goal kicked off the line with Calderon beaten.

This had to be Canada's best ever international performance and quite amazingly it was achieved by a team which contained eight amateurs and very limited international experience. This team was a great credit to coach Frank Pike who built it up to this standard in just one month.

With this win Mexico clinched a place in the second round and made their final game against the US in Los Angeles meaningless, however, the Mexicans won this one as well, leaving the United States just one point from four games.

Departure

In this final game before 13,855, Gene Geimer gave the US the lead after eight minutes. Three minutes later Sergio Ceballas equalized and from then on it was all Mexico. Mike Winter, surely the best goalkeeper the US has ever produced, was outstanding and turned back repeated attacks, until after making a good save from Joel Andrade he failed to hold the ball and Borbolla scored from the rebound.

So once again the US and Canada have made an early departure from the World Cup, but whereas the Canadians can be more pleased with the performance of their young team (average age 21), the United States on the other hand will have to show drastic improvement in organization before 1976 and the next preliminary round if they are to put the talents of some of their players to better use.

Of the third member of this group the Mexicans—it would now seem likely that their experience will carry them through the second round against the winners of the other five groups in this area. But they will have to show considerable improvement by 1974 if they are to do well in West Germany.

NORTH AMERICAN SOCCER LEAGUE

1973 Preview — Bigger and Better

S PORTING the strongest and most stable membership in its seven year history the North American Soccer League with nine teams, including a new franchise in Philadelphia, and new owners in Miami, Rochester and Atlanta, prepares for the 1973 season The season openers were Saturday, May 5.

In addition to the strenghtened ownership position, the League has made three other very significant changes. First of all, the League structure has been changed from two divisions of four teams each to three divisions of three teams each and will be aligned as follows:

Northern Division-Montreal, Rochester, Toronto;

Eastern Division-Miami, New York, Philadelphia;

Southern Division-Atlanta, Dallas, St. Louis.

The teams reaching the League playoffs, scheduled for the weekends of August 19 and 26, will be the three divisional champions and the second place team with the most points.

Secondly, each NASL team will play a League schedule of 19 games, as compared to 14 in 1972, consisting of a home and home series with each team in the league, an additional home game with one team in its division, an additional away game with the other team in its division and a home international game against Vera Cruz F. C. of Mexico which will count in the League standings.

Thirdly, the NASL has received permission from the International Rules Board, the Canadian Soccer Association and the USSFA to experiment with the traditional offside rule to provide for a new "blue line" concept which will allow an attacking player to move to within 35 yards of the goal without being concerned with offside. The change was made to open up the midfield area which has become greatly congested due to tactics used under the traditional rule.

"The people within the League have never been so optimistic about the future of the game in North America," stated NASL Commissioner Phil Woosnam. "The success of the college draft has shown that each year the quality of home grown talent has taken significant steps forward, in fact the rosters of Toronto, Montreal and Philadelphia as well as St. Louis, may well consist of a majority of native talent. The increase in average attendance from 3,500 in 1971 to over 5000 per game in 1972 which included eight 10,000-plus gates has given us every indication that professional soccer will follow the successful path of professional football and ice hockey in the very near future.

"Expansion to nine was only the first step. We have set our sights on a maximum of 16 teams for 1974 which would bring the League back to the West Coast. Eventually we project a league consisting of 32 teams which will engulf most of the major markets on the continent."

As far as the 1973 season is concerned, if history repeats itself the New York Cosmos chances of retaining their NASL crown are nil. No team in the first six seasons has ever repeated and with the improved competition within the League and the new divisional alignments, the NASL is looking forward to an extremely exciting season with keen competition for the playoff spots.

Atlanta's Mike Hoban (4) dark jersey, out-jumps St. Louis' John Sewell befo: e 12,123 in Atlanta. Chiefs won 1-0. Others in picture are: St. Louis: Gene Geimer (14); Atlanta: Alan Hamlyn (16), Uriel (11), Alec Papadakis (12)

The American Look

THE 1973 NASL season is only a few weeks old and already two players have scored hatricks. Both, believe it or not, are native Americans. Gene Geimer, the talented second year forward of the St. Louis Stars from St. Louis University, and Joe Fink, the astonishing rookie of the New York Gosmos from NYU, who accomplished the feat in his NASL debut.

These are not isolated exceptions as in the past, but rather the rule. Who would have expected Dallas' Kyle Rote, Jr., the son of the former New York Giant Football great and network sportscaster, to be leading the Tornado in scoring with two goals and two assists in four games. Much speculation surrounded Rote when he was drafted by Dallas in the first round of the 1972 collegiate draft and the speculation continued as he spent the year on the bench surveying the Texas Stadium field which would welcome him with a goal in his professional debut in the 1973 Tornado opener.

Never before have such an abundance of native American and Canadian players earned places in the NASL line-ups, meeting their opportunities with impressive performances that have gained them spots once filled by the established veterans.

Philadelphia and Montreal have joined with St. Louis to field teams consisting of at least half American and Canadian talent balanced with experienced players to control and direct their enthusiasm and energy.

Philadelphia goalkeeper, Bob Rigby, the first selection in the 1973 NASL College Draft has played brilliantly in the Atoms goal and is certainly one reason they are leading the Cosmos in the Eastern Division. Other reasons are acquisitions Stan Startzel (from New York) and Barry Barto (from Montreal), both 1972 draft selections, third round draft choice Bob Smith from Rider College, Olympic team selection Casey Bahr and local standout Lew Meehl.

In addition to signing All-American University of Penn defender Bill Straub, the Olympique de Montreal has gone Canadian with speedsters Jim Corsi, Austin Cumberbatch, Gordon Christie and Gordon Wallace up front and Ian Tyer and Chris Horrocks bolstering the defense.

Toronto has also added Canadian forwards Joe Schiraldi and Peter Roc, who has scored twice in his first three games.

Mike Seerey, the first player ever to win the annual Bob Hermann Award, given to the outstanding Collegiate player in the USA, in consecutive years, 1971 and 1972 while with St. Louis University had his debut for Miami against Dallas.

The Rochester Lancers have signed All-American forwards Andy Rymarczuk of Penn State and Mario Camacho of Quincy and free agent defender Phil Russo of Hartwick. Rymarczuk played brilliantly in his debut against Finn Harp assisting on the games only goal by Carlos Metidieri and then came back two days later to create havoc in the St. Louis Stars defense in a 3-1 Lancer victory.

Although inexperience has been his worst enemy, Atlanta coach Ken Bracewell has growing confidence in Michigan State All-American defender Steve Twellman. Canadian Alec Papadakis from Hartwick University maintains his place in midfield for the Apollos. In addition to Fink, the New York Cosmos have been getting steady mid-field play from former Columbian All-American Len Renery and considerable showmanship and reliability in backup goalkeeper Shep Messing, an All-American from Harvard and U.S. Olympic team selection.

It has been taken for granted that St. Louis fields a nearly All-American team each time out. But even the Stars, who last year proved to the NASL what American players can accomplish by reaching the NASL Championship Game, have inserted their eighth and ninth American players into the starting line-up compared to seven last year. Olympic representatives Al Trost and Art "Buzz" Demling, and Denny Vaninger have been the Stars' big signings of the season.

These developments have been extremely encouraging to the NASL coaches who see the day of predominantly native North American rosters dawning even earlier than they expected.

"Rote, Fink, Seerey, Geimer, Schiraldi, Roe, Corsi, Rymarczuk, Rigby, Barto, Trost, Demling, etc.," stated Commissioner Phil Woosnam, "may not be household names today, but these players have already made a lasting impression . . . and who knows what new native talent will make an impact before the season is out."

Cosmos Win Title—1972

THE New York Cosmos are the new champions of the North American Soccer League following a dramatic late winning goal in the final against the St. Louis Stars.

New York took the lead early in the game which was played at Hofstra Stadium on Long Island with Randy Horton, voted the Most Valuable Player in the NASL this season, heading in a cross from Israeli international Ruben Young.

The Cosmos were on top throughout the first 25 minutes with young St. Louis goalkeeper Mike Winter in superb form, and as the game progressed St. Louis began to come back and by half time were unfortunate not to be level.

Pat McBride was having an excellent game in midfield and he was instrumental in offsetting the New York midfield pair of John Kerr and Siggy Stritzl, who have been the key to much of the success that the Cosmos have enjoyed this season.

With seven minutes of the second half gone former Crystal Palace player John Sewell found McBride. He headed it on to Casey Frankiewicz standing alone in front of the New York goal and the former Polish international gave goalkeeper Richard Blackmore no chance from close range.

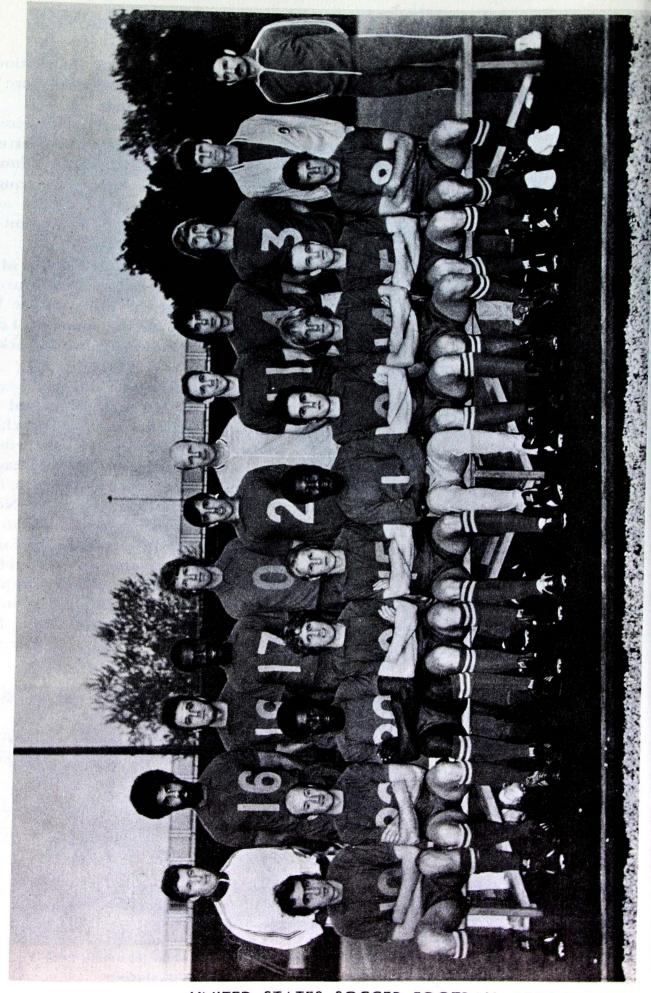

Both teams went close as the tension built up with sudden death overtime approaching, but with four minutes left to play John Kerr was brought down in the St. Louis penalty area and the referee had no hesitation in awarding a penalty.

Josef Jelinek took the kick but Mike Winter dived the right way and turned the ball against the inside of the left post, but sadly for the young St. Louis goalkeeper it ended up in the back of the net.

It was the climax to the sixth season of play in the NASL and followed two semi-finals between the division champions and runners-up in the Northern and Southern sections of the league. St. Louis, champions in the South, beat Rochester the runners-up in the North in one semi-final by two goals to nil with Sewell and Geimer scoring for St. Louis, while in the other semi-final New York beat last year's champions the Dallas Tornado with a goal in the 60th minute from John Kerr. New York had earlier won the Northern Division championship.

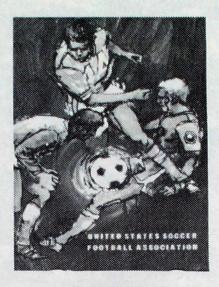

Cosmos Joseph Jelinek (10) dribbles against Moscow Dynamo while teammate Roby Young (8) looks on, before more than 13,000 at Hofstra stadium.

IT'S AN ATOMIC EXPLOSION

The Philadelphia Atoms, newest members of the NASL, literally exploded on the pro scene this season. With two-thirds of the schedule completed, Al Miller's charges were being freely tipped as play-off candidates, and were odds-on favorites to cop the NASL title at the first attempt. Following an opening day loss to Si. Louis, the Atoms went 14 games (at the time of printing) without a loss. Victories included 4-0 and 1-0 wins over Ireland's Finn Harp and Mexco's Vera Cruz. # Atoms—Native Talent Pleasant Surprises

WHAT remarkable success stories the Philadelphia Atoms and the influx of native talent have been. Just over the halfway mark of the season, Tom McCloskey's Atoms, under the direction of coach Al Miller, set a League record of 12 consecutive games without a defeat before losing to Miami in the Orange Bowl 2-1. The Atoms are also leading the League in attendance with an average of nearly 10,000.

With the streak the Atoms amassed a league leading total of 76 points and appear to be the favorite for the Eastern Division title. However, with the likes of a vastly improved Miami team, and the defending NASL Champion Cosmos in their division, and a difficult road schedule ahead of them, they can't be assured of anything yet.

A midseason surge has brought the Miami Toros into contention. Flashy Warren Archibald, with a league leading ten goals and three assists in thirteen games has led the surge. A midseason slump which resulted in three 2-1 defeats and the loss of the NASL's 1972 Most Valuable Player and leading scorer, Randy Horton, for a month, dropped the Cosmos to third place. However, they still hope for a late season return to form which would earn them the "Wildcard" berth in the playoffs.

It looks as if Dallas and St. Louis will battle each other to the wire for the Southern Division crown. Both have a substantial lead on Atlanta and either could well have enough points to gain the wildcard berth if they are unable to finish on top.

Toronto's three game win streak at the end of June shot them into first place in the Northern Division. Meanwhile, the Olympique de Montreal have made a late surge and moved past Rochester into second place. Both clubs will be hard pressed to catch the Metros. Rochester now must prevail in their three games to be played with Toronto in the last month of the season.

The most significant progress made by the NASL has been the successful insertion of a record number of native talent into the starting line-ups. Gene Geimer (St. Louis), Kyle Rote (Dallas), and Joe Fink (New York), are among the League's top five scorers and Mike Seerey (Miami), is not far behind.

Other standouts have been goalkeeper Bob Rigby (Philadelphia), midfielders Al Trost (St. Louis), Barry Barto (Philadelphia), and Len Renery (New York) and defenders Steve Twellman (Atlanta), Kevin Howe (Atlanta), Jeff Solem (Atlanta), Buzz Demling (St. Louis), Chris Horrocks (Montreal).

In addition, with record opening day crowds averaging nearly 10,000, the NASL appears to be turning the corner which three years ago was barely visible.

The Cincinnati Comets . . . 1972 American Soccer League Champions on their first road trip of the season. They defeated the Pittsburgh Canons 2-1 enroute to the A.S.L. Title.

Out of Obscurity

THE American Soccer League, reorganized and redesigned, has kicked off its 1973 season of Professional Soccer.

America's oldest professional soccer entity (dating to 1933) has, for the first time in its long history, achieved a level of professionalism that will solidify the worlds number one sport . . . in the U.S.A.

The A.S.L. has elected new officers comprising the Executive Board, accepted three of nine applications for new franchises, established new and more stringent policies and redesigned its constitution which clearly indicates that professional soccer is no longer just a meaningless phrase . . . but the beginning of serious (profit) designed business.

The Executive Board is as follows: President: Walter Cleaver, part-owner of the Delaware Wings. Walter is an Accountant by profession currently involved in chemical procurement management. His dedication to the sport and to the continued development of the A.S.L. organizational policy will be invaluable.

First Vice President: Doctor Nick Capurro, part-owner and coach of the 1972 American League National Champions . . . The Cincinnati Comets. Dr. Capurro is a County Coronor and Surgeon by profession . . . a Soccer Coach by design. A former first division player in Italy, Dr. Capurro spearheaded the Cincinnati Comets to the National Title in their inaugural season as a professional team.

Second Vice President: Walter Peters
—Schaefer Brewers General Manager.
Walter is a former professional player in the A.S.L. (Scotch Americans) and a member of the Soccer Hall of Fame inducted at Cleveland 1968.

Third Vice President: Joseph Tavrazich, owner of the Detroit Mustangs of the Midwest Conference. A soccer "Nut," Joe's involvement in soccer is nearing three decades.

Secretary: Al Barrish, part-owner of the Delaware Wings. Al is well-known in soccer circles as a referee and coach in the Delaware Valley Area.

Treasurer: Ted Marchese—Schoolteacher-Accountant and part-owner of the Philadelphia Spartans. Ted also has many years experience as referee and coach of soccer in the Philadelphia area.

Public Relations Director: John Paris, General Manager and Vice President of the Cincinnati Comets. A graduate of the University of Cincinnati in communications, he has spent most of his career in broadcast journalism and public relations (20 years). John views soccer as the sport of the future. John is determined to continue providing an accurate, professional, informational flow of American Soccer League sports events, and general league information to the nationwide interest in the game.

American business interests have finally begun to see the profit possibilities in professional soccer. This "Americanized" interest was the necessary impetus which inspired a great marriage in the professional athletic community. The tremendous expertise provided by attorneys, businessmen, public relations men, coupled with the great knowledge of the game provided by those staunch ethnic backgrounds so dedicated to the game, have proven to be the perfect balance of ingredients to provide a "New Look" American Soccer League.

We are not about to forget, however, how the American Soccer League arrived at its current level of high professionalism. Names such as Gene Chyzowych, Carl Schiebock and Brian Stewart stand out glaringly. These are just a few of the men, who bore the brunt of serious organizational complications in the A.S.L. from 1969 thru 1972 . . . those years of turmoil and, in some cases, disorientation. They weathered the many storms of a relatively discontented organization through determination and steadfastness. They provided the real strength of a faltering machinery which concluded in 1972, in a season of professional soccer that bridged the gap of an indecisive future.

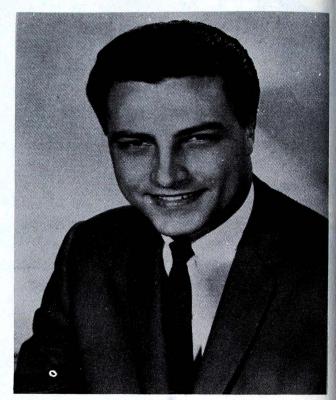

Gene, President of the A.S.L. in 1972, will continue to provide his expertise of the game and his knoweldge of the league as a special administrator to the newly elected President Walter Cleaver. Carl Schiebock, one of the most knoweldgeable men in the Soccer Industry will continue to provide his flow of American Soccer League activities information to the media. Brian Stewart, former Public Relations Director of the A.S.L., will continue to provide his organizational talent as Recording Secretary to the Executive Board of the A.S.L. Both Carl and Brian will play a large role in the public relations campaign in cooperation with this writer. Their determination and loyalty have made possible this new 1973 level of organization.

As to the future of soccer at all levels consider these following facts.

Youth Soccer Movements are growing rapidly throughout the country in all major cities. Some of these run to as many as fifty thousand young people in organized competition in St. Louis alone. More than ten thousand boys and girls ranging in age from five years to eighteen years are in organized soccer competition in Cincinnati, and the list is long and continues to soar.

State Athletic Associations have declared that soccer is now a Varsity Sport in high schools (Ohio and others).

John Paris, General Manager of the Cincinnati Comets and Vice President of the Executive Board. Award for best public relations effort in the A.S.L. during 1972.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association has recognized Soccer as a Varsity Sport at the college level.

A Gallup Poll (January 22, 1973—New York Times), clearly shows that Soccer is now ranked fifth in the country as a spectator sport . . . behind only football, baseball, basketball and boxing. Soccer interest grew by 12% since 1960 . . . ten times more than any other sport in the United States.

Other facts include statements by General William Westmoreland to the National Soccer Coaches Association Annual Meeting in January of this year, to the effect, his world travels convinced him that soccer was indeed the number one sport in the world, and because of its tremendous test of stamina and agility soccer is singularly responsible for the development of the European and Latin American youngster to a stamina capability six times that of the average American youngster.

Another fact, Soccer has provided an entirely new latitude of play for the potential professional athlete, since it does not restrict a player because of height and weight. Soccer has proven in hundreds of high schools and colleges throughout America, and virtually thousands of elementary schools, to be an inexpensive athletic endeavor.

The American Soccer League has been able to show steady and consistent progress because of a number of calculated variables.

The "Sunday Afternoon Picnic" approach to the game, pitting one ethnic background against the other, is gone. More and more American born athletes are becoming involved, and the American Business approach to the game is requiring a never-before utilized discipline factor in the organization of the various clubs.

The media has recognized the great potential of the soccer match at all levels of play; both the print and electronic media have opened themselves to the self-education process necessary to inform the interested public in this growing sport. They have been, and are continuing to be, extremely helpful in the factual dissemination of Soccer Information.

The American Soccer League has restructured its conferences to include three new franchises including the (Gary) Indiana Tigers, Midwest Conference, and the Syracuse Suns and Connecticut Wildcats both of the Northeast Conference.

The Tentative Conference Structure is as Follows:

Midwest Conference: Cincinnati Comets, Cleveland Stars, Detroit Mustangs, Indiana Tigers.

Northeast Conference: New York Greeks, Boston Astros, Syracuse Suns, Connecticut Wildcats.

Mid-Atlantic Conference: Delaware Wings, Baltimore Stars, Philadelphia Spartans, Schaefer Brewers.

A.S.L. President, Walter Cleaver, said "Several franchise requests were refused this year because the geographic locations would have interferred with the conference structure and scheduling process, a necessary consideration to guarantee a smooth flow of league operation, match play, administration and flow of money". Cleaver continued, "The A.S.L. will not accept franchises for the sake of league development, unless each franchise can prove its financial and operational ability to compete without inflicting upon itself unusual and difficult financial burdens". "This has been the secret of the A.S.L.'s success patter in developing the largest and most competitive professional soccer league in the country, and it's continuing to grow. "It's all part of our long range pattern of growth in the next three to five years".

The formula of the on-going success factor, of the A.S.L. has proven to be, (a) a teams financial structure within reach of an interested investiture in relation to the number of paying fans at the turnstiles, (b) proper geographic patterns designed to keep travel and other heavy expenditures to a minimum and, (c) a nationwide public relations effort . . . all of this, the result of several "Trial and Error" years.

The American Soccer League and Soccer in general, is at the threshold of a Brilliant New Era.

1972 NCAA UNIVERSITY DIVISION SOCCER CHAMPIONSHIP

For Billikens, it was Revenge

by HUBERT VOGELSINGER Coach, Yale University

N NCAA Championship is a display of talent, excitement, and heer drama. Since it brings together ll that has rank and name in the port, it is a well of inspiration for hose who witness it as well as for hose who participate. It also serves as n indication of the game's quality, organization, popularity, and future possibilities. From this year's NCAA occer Tournament the Howard conroversy serves as a reminder of priprities; the standard of play is enouraging; even greater numbers of ine players will be coming along because the game is booming at the grassroots level; and since the professional game is prospering, the outtanding will have increased opporunity for play after college.

St. Louis University edged out the defending collegiate champion Howard University 2:1 in a sudden-death semi-final overtime and went on to win the 1972 NCAA Tournament, its ninth out of fourteen, by a 4:2 victory over UCLA at the Orange Bowl in Miami.

Four teams with varying degrees of success in their leagues went to the semi-finals: St. Louis, with a 12-3-3 record, one of the worst in its recent history; UCLA was 11-1-3; Cornell, after a surprising victory over the Harvard team that had defeated them easily in league competition, had 13-5; and Howard University, with a roster recently depleted because of NCAA rulings, with no losses.

The Semi-Final, THE Game

The semi-final revenge match between Howard University and St. Louis University, for many THE game, was a head-on collision. The evening was uncharacteristically cold but the air was filled with excitement and expectation.

Howard was sensitive because of the loss of players Keith Aqui and others and St. Louis was determined to ease the memory of their 3:2 loss to Howard in the 1971 Tournament. (Of course, with the new ruling, Howard is no longer considered the winner of the 1971 Tournament because of irregularities enumerated by the NCAA, but neither is St. Louis; the title will remain vacant.

From the opening kick-off it was clear that both teams had a score to settle because the tension and atmosphere were electrifying. The clash proved to be interesting because of the differing tactics and styles of play. St. Louis played their all-out, high-pressure attacking game and Howard effected a sophisticated, cautious, well-organized, tight defensive game that relied mainly on a well-prepared sporadic counterattack.

By midway into the first half St. Louis' Dennis Hadican had scored handsomely and so had Howard's Ian Bain. The pace of the game was punishing because St. Louis kept continuous pressure on the Howard defense, untiringly beating Howard to the ball, marking tightly, and tackling quickly and aggressively. The Howard players displayed great footwork and finesse, but the physical stress defused the talent of Ian Bain and company toward the completion of the game and left a number of Howard players lying repeatedly on the field with leg cramps.

Excitement rose with sudden-death overtime. As play developed it seemed it would be impossible to end the stalemate. Then at 7:45 one of the most picturesque plays of the tournament produced the tiebreaker for St. Louis. Dennis Hadican made an exciting run down the left flank leaving a few Bison defenders in his wake. Then he centered a well-timed cross in front of the goalmouth for Dan Counce to run onto and head home from about seven yards out.

A wild uproar followed. The St. Louis players acted as if they had won the final, and indeed for many everything afterward was anti-climactic.

Cornell, the Cinderella Team

Cornell, the unexpected Ivy League representative, had already played UCLA in the semi final opener where they surprised UCLA by their plucky competitive play. The western team was never really able to take command because Cornell made up in courage and determination for whatever they may have lacked in talent. The only goal by either side was in the first half on a feeble 8-yard shot 37 minutes into p'ay by UCLA's Fessecha Wolde-Emmanuel.

There was some justification for the comment after the game by Dennis Storer, the UCLA coach, that Cornell was a hard team to look good against, because from the outset Cornell was clearly not interested in winning a prize for pretty play. They were prepared to do whatever possible to throw UCLA off their game in the hope of capitalizing on it. The Big Red played very defensively, neglecting the midfield completely, not hesitating to bridge it with a long boot upfield, hoping to score with a quick breakaway. And these tactics almost paid off because they had numerous scoring opportunities which their forwards again and again failed to take advantage of. The game ended with a 1:0 victory for UCLA.

A Grueling Final

The final game then was St. Louis University against UCLA two nights later. The favorite was St. Louis. The only question was how great had been the toll physically and mentally on the St. Louis team because of their tough, intense, over-time game against Howard. The feeling was that the trouble St. Louis would have with UCLA would be determined by how strong they could come back.

From the opening whistle St. Louis made it evident that they intended to dominate the game and settle the issue as quickly as possible. They set a punishing pace, determinedly marking tight the UCLA players who needed room for their style of play. St. Louis' conditioning, tactics, and teamwork simply outweighed again and again the sophistication of the individually talented UCLA players.

At 41:52, almost the end of the first half, Dan Counce converted a loose ball into St. Louis' first score. UCLA come back in the second half of the game more cohesive, though still not showing the sustained attacking pressure they needed to break through the St. Louis defense.

Then a peculiar thing happened. Was it the two balls on the field that caused confusion, a lack of concentration by UCLA players, or the quick thinking of the St. Louis players? The UCLA defense had cleared the ball over the touch line about 20 yards from their goal. Another ball found its way to the St. Louis thrower before the first one was off the field, a confusion apparently unseen by referees. St. Louis quickly took the throw and Dennis Hadican whizzed past the defenders, including goalie Steve Burnside, who had his back to the play. And the score was 2:0 in favor of St. Louis.

UCLA fought desperately to turn the tide. On a great run down the wing, Manuel Meza hung onto the ball despite hard knocks by St. Louis players, turned the St. Louis defense, and cut the ball back in front of the goalmouth for Tekeda Alemu who had little trouble halving the St. Louis lead with a slamming shot.

Bedlam Broke Loose

A St. Louis player reportedly kicked a UCLA attacker and a fight was in evidence. Both benches emptied onto the field and suddenly spectators were confronted with a championship brawl for 12-15 minutes. When play resumed, players, coaches, and the tournament itself had been desecrated. The St. Louis goalie was replaced because of injury by Al Steck. And shortly afterward Coach Storer commendably took Solom Ferfa off the field for a blatant foul against a St. Louis player.

UCLA began showing great determination. But before they could capitalize on it, Mike Seery within two minutes had scored twice more for St. Louis, first by converting a fumbled rebound by the UCLA goalkeeper, Steve Burnside, and then by taking a peautiful pass from Dan Counce for an 18-yard shot into the upper corner of the goal. Though Alemu scored again for UCLA with 13 minutes left to play, St. Louis' strength was decisive and they took the 1972 title.

Dan Counce of St. Louis was selected the most valuable offensive player of the tournament. And certainly his contributions were many, including the overtime goal against Howard, the opening goal against UCLA, as well as crucial assists. Cornell's goalkeeper, Bruce Arena, received the award for the best defensive player with spectacular saves to his credit that kept the score 1:0 against

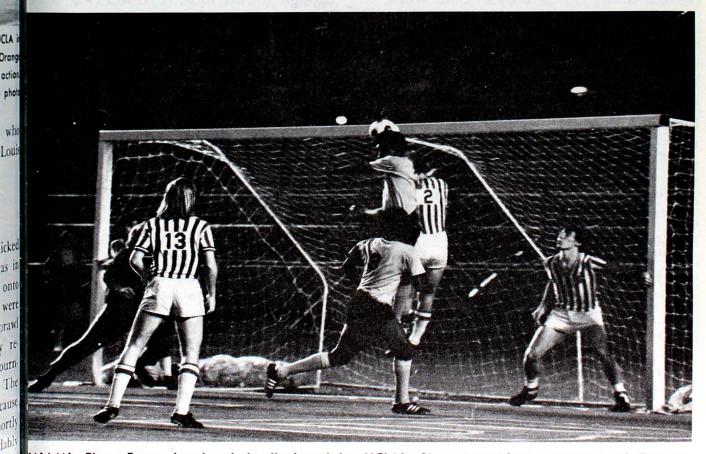

UCLA.

The Champion's Style of Play

It should be interesting and constructive to analyze the system and style of play of our NCAA champion.

St. Louis has been playing for years within the classic 4-2-4 system. Vincent Fiola, coach of the Brazilian team, is generally considered to be the father of the 4-2-4 as he used this flexible formula to win the 1958 World Cup in Sweden.

In basic terms, there is a goalkeeper and four backs strung across the field: two fullbacks and two center backs. Two players, link men or midfield players, look after the foraging and purveying necessities in midfield. And four forwards play in front of them: two wing forwards and two central strikers.

In Chuck Zorumski St. Louis had a goalkeeper who exerted the necessary authority within the goal area and beyond when needed, one who radiated enough confidence to stabilize the defense.

The four-man defense operating on a zone principle, using a two-man pivot, assured enough manpower at any given time to thwart any surprise counterattack. In Dennis Werner and Mark Demling, St. Louis had fast and deft fullbacks, a combination with a touch of the old and the more contemporary styles of fullback. They had no hesitation clearing the ball upfield when under pressure or being creative if the opportunity arose. They were eager to assist the midfield and never hesitated to join in the attack on an overlap whenever the opportunity presented itself. Their only evident weakness was a tendency to manhandle their immediate opponent, with the result that they often overcommitted themselves in situations where a temporary delay would have been tactically wiser. The center backs, or pivots, Bruce Hudson and Bob Matteson, were physically dominating, strong in the air as well as in the tackle, and basically sound in giving cover to each other and their fullbacks in turn. However, they seemed cumbersome, lacking in mobility and quick recovery, which at times created dangerous situations.

Collectively the St. Louis defense was stronger than in past years, primarily because their goalkeeper seemed more competent and authoritative than his predecessors; this reflected on the whole defense.

The weaknesses of the defense were (a) on the fast break because the overlaps by fullbacks were at times untimely and ill-prepared and (b) the defenders were caught square too often and too long when retreating and especially in the process of meeting an attacking thrust that was changed quickly across the field. Both of the above-mentioned problems are inherent weaknesses of the four-back defense and consequently one of the hardest aspects to master.

The midfield is the heart, the engine room of the 4-2-4 system. The task of the midfield players is obviously critical and tremendously demanding They not only have to prepare the defense from midfield through delaying tactics, sound positioning, forcing the opponent to pass square across the field rather than through, but they must also prepare the attack from midthrough clever interpassing, changing the pace of the game, switching attacking thrust and brilliant, inspirational individual play.

Hamm and  $\mathbf{Bob}$ O'Leary, though industrious, hard-working players, were not exactly the demanding, authoritative, creative players needed to make the 4-2-4 an adventurous style of play. They were effective in preparing the defense from midfield. But they fell short in creative, imaginative ability that would ignite their attack with inspiration and unpredictability, or even in taking hold of the game and changing its course single-handedly. One certainly cannot forget the demanding play, the thrusting runs, of Al Trost in years past.

St. Louis compensated masterfully for the apparent shortcomings of their link men as well as the weakness endemic to the 4-2-4 system, which is the heavy burden of the midfield players. Through the heavy work rate of all players they were able to stay together as a close-knit unit, avoiding the common midfield gap and assuring the necessary support in midfield from the fullbacks and wing forwards.

When in attack the defense moved quickly upfield, allowing the fullbacks o support the midfield players (an xcellent preparation also for a timely verlap). In defense attackers fell ack; the wingers particularly took heir share of helping the midfielders, ssisting them in the build-up of atack. This falling back of the forvards also put them in an ideal posiion to initiate an effective counterttack. The wingers looked for posiions where they could easily be reachd with an outlet pass from defense o initiate a quick counterattack.

St. Louis' midfield play was satisactory from a defensive point of view out was weak in attack. There was oo much time taken to initiate an attack from midfield. Play was too deliberate, went over too many staions, that is, too much negative play -square passing.

In attack St. Louis has always relied Plaupon strong wing play. In Jim Bokern and Dennis Hadican they had two eedt sound all-round players who unfortunately lacked some of the daring Pathrusting abilities necessary to effect Badangerous wing play. Though they did their share in assisting in midfield attainthrough sound positioning and were bility consequently always available for an gameasy pass to feet, most of the time these passes were promptly pushed back into midfield. And they seldom did anything positive, such as taking on their immediate opponent, turning the defense through positive running among and behind opposing defenders in order to create havoc, or cutting toward goal and taking a shot themselves.

Mike Seery and Dan Counce were the sole striking force and the only two who presented an immediate danger to the opposition. Both are outstanding players. But Seery, heralded as the most outstanding American player in the collegiate ranks, was not as impressive as in the past two years.

It must be said in his defense that he had not had a break from soccer for over a year because he took part in the Munich Olympics. One missed his explosiveness, individual initiative, and he more often than not avoided direct conflict by wandering into midfield, causing the Billiken attack to suffer. Dan Counce was deservingly rewarded for his great performance by being selected as the tournament's outstanding offensive player.

The St. Louis attack was effective in getting within 30 yards of their opponent's goal. In fact they looked most impressive the way they pushed the ball around as if it had a built-in radar. One was always on the edge of his seat expecting something exciting to develop. But the final thrust-the vital through pass, the determined run, individual brilliant dribble, or thunderous shot only too seldom materialized.

In conclusion, one could quote the opposing coach, Dennis Storer, "They are so awfully strong." And indeed they were. Moreover, substitutions made no marked difference to the team which showed that their bench strength was considerable. Harry Keough himself said, "This is my strongest team ever."

The essential ingredient of a successful 4-2-4 style of play is the athletic ability of its players and their willingness to put out a high work rate. What St. Louis may have lacked in individual brilliance they masterfully made up for in outstanding team work. With precision coordination between individuals, segments and the team as a whole, their play moved forward as invincably as the tide. St. Louis was a deserving champion!

And when we consider the high standard of play in these games and realize that the final contestants, St. Louis included, were given stiff competition in all parts of the country, even defeats, it can be seen that soccer itself is on the way up, with national standards of play rising.

Soccer Needs Dialogue and Promotion

The NCAA Championship is THE event of the year. By its nature, it is a parade of the best talent, which combined with the setting and the stakes, brings out the best the sport has to offer. Good promotion provides the country with a source of pride and inspiration and the effect on the development of the sport should be long lasting.

The Orange Bowl certainly seems to be the proper setting. The weather is almost ideal, the stadium attractive and well located. The timing, however, is unfortunate. The championship was designed to be a part of the Orange Bowl festivities, a great idea, a boost for soccer. But holding the games in late December, more than a month after the interscholastic season has ceased operation, means that all the momentum gathered (spectator enthusiasm, news media interest) through the season's competitions and eliminations for the tournament, is lost. A promotional campaign has to start from scratch. And as if fate were against soccer, it so happened that for two years in a row the floundering Miami Dolphins football team became a Superbowl contender, with the result that soccer was in direct competition at this time with football. And we got swamped. Symbolic of the place assigned to soccer in this duel was the preparation by television crewmen for the upcoming football matches DUR-ING the soccer NCAA competition in the Bowl (a double disappointment for many who assumed that TV cameras meant that soccer was at last getting priority treatment).

Whatever responsibilities the Orange Bowl Committee took to promote this championship consequently fell short Granted that local television station showed on their sport shows film clip of soccer practices in the Bowl; a local radio station had open line talks with two finalist coaches; and newspaper carried short daily stories and promo tional ads leading up to the semi-final and final events. But nationally the soccer NCAA championships were one of the best kept secrets of the year Even final results failed to be carried by most newspapers throughout the country.

Somebody has to supply the wire services with news stories for tournal ment coverage—an Orange Bowl Com mittee, an Intercollegiate Soccer Foot ball Association Committee, or the Perhaps the best solution would be to have the Intercollegiate Soccer Football Association send its own PR man to the games with the sole responsibility of furnishing the news media with game information line-ups, statistics, play-off scores, and color stories about the teams and play ers. Adequate coverage of the Tournament is essential for the growth and development of the sport. Moreover we owe it to the participating teams and their institutions, and more important, to the players who deserve recognition for their hard work in reaching this competition.

Of equal concern is to have the final NCAA games televized nationally. The exposure is desperately needed to sustain vitality in the game. Surely the NCAA as the organizing and governing body of intercollegiate sports has as one of their major objectives the development and promotion of those sports, including those that enjoy less popularity. Even from an economic point of view, it must be in their interest to promote the soccer championships. With all the power of their national organization the NCAA must be able to influence the major networks to televize the soccer finals, perhaps in a package deal that includes more popular sports. In any case, it is clear that more organized influence on our associations for national television coverage of the Tournament is certainly needed.

Was Howard's Chastisement a Racial Issue?

It was unfortunate that quotes from the Wall Street Journal and the New York Times misconstrued the act of disqualifying Howard players for the semi-final and final NCAA games as a racial issue.

"It would be hard to ignore the fact that this might be a racial thing. I don't know if the other schools would be so resentful if we weren't a black university winning with black players."

"There are very few backyards around that are clean."

"This sort of thing has been going on for years, but nothing came of it until Howard became the national champion. I wonder if a lot of Southerners aren't being a bit silly."

The NCAA as the governing body and its members (including Howard) have agreed to certain rules which are applicable to all in order to establish equality within the competition. Clearly, an infringement of these rules is taking unfair advantage of the rest of the members. Therefore, the NCAA, when the violation was brought to its attention, had no choice but to take away the championship from Howard for last year and declare members of the 1972 squad ineligible for the semi-final and final of the championship.

Introducing the racial issue fails to focus on the true source of the problem. It is regrettable that Howard University ignored its responsibility in the matter, for it is their sole obligation as a member institution to check on the eligibility of every squad member.

Exposure of national violation, with the implication that anything would be done to win, downgrades the sport and creates disrespect for those who are sincerely dedicated to the sport.

Soccer is Booming at the Grassroots Level

Soccer through church groups, departments of recreation, YMCA's, amateur teams, and the like is growing fast. Let's not forget in our enthusiastic crusade that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. As encouraging as all this interest is, we want to keep things in proper perspective. We don't want to see a parallel to Little League Baseball organization taking form.

Little League started out as a great idea to increase interest in the young for the sport and since has contributed more drop-outs than advocates. It is not only the gifted few we're trying to develop but active involvement by a large majority who will achieve a high degree of enjoyment and improved fitness through play. With try-out at an early age (forcing players to meet failure by not being acceptable performers), rigid practice schedules, game schedules, stress on the importance of performing well, winning the league championship, making the teams, play-offs, and award systems, banquets, and publicity creates the danger of pushing the sport far beyond saturation point. The pressure in such organization, added to the cumulative pressures of achieving success in school and at home, may cause the player to lose the great zest he has for the game and to give it up entirely by the time he is in high school or college. Participation becomes too compulsory, imposed rather than self-motivated, and consequently the game no longer provides enough satisfaction or fun.

If there is any doubt about great interest without such excessive pressure of high organization and winning, just listen to the chatter of young players after a game. What they talk about is not so much who won or lost but the goal someone scored or the fancy play they or someone else made. In their natural positive disposition they find something exciting about the game; they just look for the good things and have a good time. And this is as it should be at this age.

There is plenty of time for organized competition at senior high school and college levels. But here, too, we need to have equal concern about overemphasis on the sport and about putting unnecessary pressure on players. Otherwise participants will be resentful of the added burden, especially with mandatory off-season practice schedules, indoor tournaments, and the like. Off-season opportunities for playing soccer in scholastic and college levels should be low-keyed recreation with voluntary attendance. Otherwise it is soccer that ultimately will suffer. The tolerance we enjoy from our coaching colleagues in football, basketball, and particularly the spring sports, will end and restrictive regulations through the NCAA will be put on us similar to those handicapping other sports. And more importantly, the players may have their joy in play nipped in the bud.

It would be much wiser if high school and college coaches in the offseasons supported and helped to organize club teams in this country, channeling them in the right direction, and thereby strengthening and assuring the vital link of continuity through amateur soccer.

Pro Scene Looks Bright

Professional soccer now seems more than ever alive and prospering, thanks to the tireless League Commissioner, Phil Woosman, who with foresight and planning is making the professional game economically feasible in long-range terms for the owners. Behind the scenes the great job Lamar Hunt is doing to encourage businessmen to invest in soccer must also be acknowledged.

It must be pointed out that the professional league as the pinnacle of the sport is vital to the development of the game. And its influence is immeasurable on all levels, playing as well as witnessing.

Seven out of the first nine draft choices for the professional teams were native American players. This reflects well on American college soccer and American coaching. It is the League's intention to Americanize the rosters in successive stages. Very few Americans are actually playing but they will get the necessary exposure which will undoubtedly help them to make the professional grade.

The fact that there is a gap between the top American talent and the foreign player in the NASL League, unfortunately no one can deny. I've often wished it were not as evident. But after visiting this year a number of teams around the country in order to witness their try-outs as well as evaluate their talent, there is no question about it. The raw talent is there, just as it is in other parts of the world. And some have already made the grade because of the great physical assets of an American athlete, his determination, hustle, and coachability. Those who have succeeded have done so usually in defense-fullback or goalkeeper —the more obvious aspects of the game which rely more on basic physical ability and can be greatly influenced through coaching. But Americans as yet rarely make an impact on the more creative part of the game, the subleties of play and improvisation that come with experience and exposure to top-class play and coaching.

A subject of great controversy is whether or not the cause of Americanizing the game at a faster rate and allowing the public to identify with the teams wouldn't justify a slight drop in the overall level of play in the NASL League. The arguments are many. It's not the subtlety of play that appeals to the American spectator who as yet is not sophisticated in the game, but the speed, danger, action which excites him. Although I am a strong advocate of using the American player, the importation of a few top-notch foreign players on every team is almost essential if for no other reason than the improvement of Americans at a faster rate through association with such players. The important thing would be to have these players integrate into the communities so that in a time they would become as much "American" as the rest of us. We have excellent examples of this in Carlos Madideiri of the Rochester Lancers, who by his play and personal response to the citizenry, has become a hero in the city. Coach Gordon Bradley of the New York Cosmos, now a resident of Long Island, is much admired in his community and has made great inroads on the development of youth soccer in that area.

If the level of American talent is to be raised, and the game per se, it is essential for the pro teams to develop a farm system and have a systematic year-round program. Not only is four months too short, but during the season the pressure of winning is the decisive influence, too much emphasis must obviously go into match preparation, conditioning, and tactical planning for match play. And therefore, very little time can be spent on the actual development of players.

The ultimate answer is, of course, the development of native talent to a high calibre of professional play. This cannot be achieved in the three months of collegiate play. Nor can it be done in four months of professional play. Although most NASL teams do not as yet have year-round programs, they realize four months is not enough and are planning indoor tournaments to extend the season and the involvement of players. Furthermore, the majority of teams have fulltime coaches who undoubtedly will provide the necessary leadership for year-round continuity in coaching.

Encouraging Signs at All Levels

The St. Louis University NCAA 1972 Championship Team is but a sample of why we have every reason to be optimistic about the game's future. The sport is developing rapidly at all levels, from grassroots amateur soccer to the schools, colleges and professional. Such continuity is essential for the development of the game. With a variety of programs, already taking form, we can offer opportunities for play from childhood to adulthood. We need only unify our efforts to promote the sport nationally and exercise leadership to channel the game's development in directions that are pedagogically sound and farsighted. Then by adapting ideas of the game from all over the world to the American temperament and characteristics, we can increase the satisfaction of both participants and spectators by striving for high standards of performance in a style of play competitive internationally but uniquely American.

1972 NCAA COLLEGE DIVISION SOCCER CHAMPIONSHIP

N

SIU: Are Cougars Second Best?

by JUD MAGRIN

FOR the first time, in 1972, the National Collegiate Association held a nation-wide college division tournament and although that tourney was treated as small time in its final stages at Southern Illinois University, it and the Senior Soccer Bowl that followed a couple weeks later went a long ways in showing soccer is a growing sport and has to be treated as big time.

For a long time I felt the coaches, players, and various athletic directors involved with this country's college soccer powers were the ones who had to begin treating the sport as big time, and it was partly true, but now the NCAA is probably the culprit after I witnessed the tourney at SIU.

Now it seems the NCAA has finally seen the light and in August the organization's big wigs will meet to revamp their entire system.

Supposedly, the reorganization will divide NCAA member schools into divisions and allow some smaller colleges to compete in the larger division in some sports where it is feasible. They will declare their intentions before the college season begins.

The general thought at the college tourney last December was that two national champions in soccer was a bit ridiculous whereas it is the only way in a sport such as basketball.

There is no question that Oneonta State who lost to SIU, 1-0, in the college final, and SIU could both have won the university tourney, held in Miami, Fla. and won by St. Louis University.

The argument will continue forever. Who is the national soccer champ, SIU or St. Louis? The two teams did play last season before 15,000 in Busch Stadium, with the result a tie.

Now a school will be able to declare what division it wishes to compete in and there will be no questions.

So apparently the NCAA has grown up a bit and now those who run the tournaments must follow suit, perhaps take a lesson from tiny Oneonta, tucked away at the foot of the Catskills in New York State.

Inevitably either Hartwick College or the "New Boy in Town", Oneonta State, have gone to a tournament. And inevitably it snows in Oneonta and presents a problem. But each year the towns people, college community and team members arise to the occasion and get a pitch in playing condition.

At SIU last year temperatures dropped 40 degrees the week of the tournament semifinals and finals. It sent officials into a tizzy as Cougar Field was frozen solid. But they had a week to prepare the field.

It came time for the Chico State-Oneonta State semifinal and it was almost switched to an auxiliary field that could not accommodate fans and the media.

It was finally decided, probably at the urgence of the media, to play the games on Cougar Field. In the semis, Oneonta beat Chico, 6-0, and SIU tripped the University of Baltimore, 4-1.

Oneonta State, speedy and with great individual talent, met the Cougars, almost perfectly methodical, two days later for their share of the national title.

The SIU defense was faultless while the Red Dragons made one mistake that cost them the game. Chris Carenza, an SIU striker who never stops running, caught O-State goalkeeper Steve Plisinski with his guard down, and banged one past him with seven minutes gone in the second half. That was the extent of the scoring for the day.

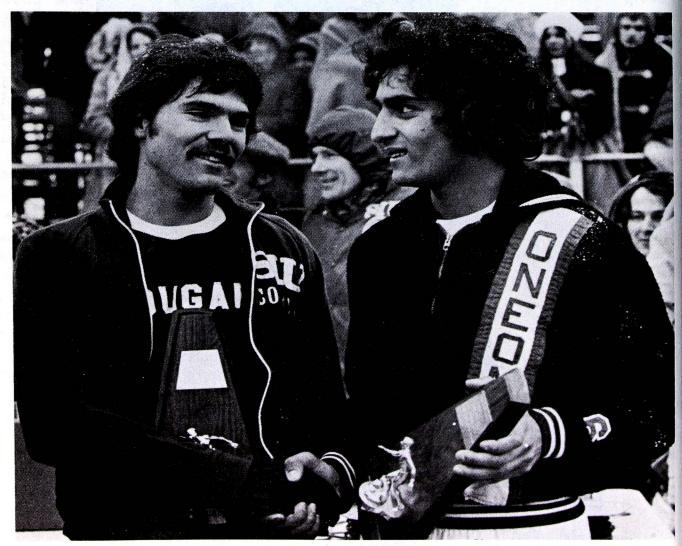

Near zero temperatures compounded by a freezing rain the entire game, cut the crowd to 1,000. Oneonta's Farrukh Quraishi was named the tourney's most valuable defensive player while SIU's John Stremau was the most valuable offensive player, having a particularly fine game against Baltimore.

The unsung hero had to be SIU's Tom Galati who played at midfield and did an outstanding job on O-State's speedster Altamont McKenzie.

It's tough to be too harsh on the handling of the tourney because of the weather but obviously it was not handled completely big time because it was second fiddle to the Miami affair.

This year if the NCAA succeeds in its realignment I think you'll see college soccer take great strides. The same strides as those taken by the professional North American Soccer League.

Farrukh Quraishi (Oneonta State) and John Stremlau (SIU), tournament MYPs.

The Day of Reckoning

by BOB WHITEMORE
Oneonta Star

A practising Christian Scientist, a rugged college president who preferred American football, a former big league baseball player, a stubborn Pennsylvania Dutchman and the tallest of all American collegiate soccer coaches combined to make Oneonta, N.Y. a most unusual place in terms of college soccer—American style.

There are two colleges in Oneonta, one a privately-owned institution and the other run by New York State. They are about a half-mile apart physically and as close as bacon and eggs when it comes to soccer. Each has reached national stature in soccer and each has gone to the national tournament, one bowing out in the university division semi-finals and the other reaching the national championship game in the college division before losing.

If one knows American sports at all, he quickly grasps the unique situation which exists in the city when two schools can reach national stature in the same sport within two years.

Haase Began Program

The story began with David Haase, now a Christian Science reader in Atlanta, Ga. He took over the soccer program in the early sixties at Hartwick College, a privately endowed school with an enrollment of about 1,700.

Backed solidly by college president Frederick M. Binder who loved American football but also understood the expense involved with the sport, Haase began a solid program of recruitment. He first turned to foreign fields, realizing that on most American campuses (high school and college) soccer was something tolerated by the administration but nothing to get excited about. And it was a good conditioner for basketball players (how oblivious people were—and are—to the rigors of the game!!)

Haase, blessed by Binder who came to realize that Hartwick's name had begun to spread as victory after victory was recorded, kept building. As his teams improved, the schedule improved and soon little Hartwick was battling—and beating—teams from Army, Notre Dame, NYU and LIU, Cornell, Colgate and others.

Finally, Hartwick reached national stature and was invited to the NCAA tournament. There was no college division tournament in those days and the Warriors were forced to compete against Harvard, St. Louis, Maryland and other great powers.

Al Miller Takes Over

As the school's fame spread, Dr. Binder turned to the pro ranks to create an administrative department for the burgeoning program. An offshoot to the soccer success was the steady influx of athletes for other sports, athletes who had heard of the great Hartwick soccer teams. Jim Konstanty, once honored as the Professional Athlete of the Year in America and a man who made his mark as a record-setting relief, pitcher for the 1950 National Baseball League championship Philadelphia club, came to Hartwick as athletic director.

All-Americans Joe Howarth (top), from Oneonta State and Hartwick's Dave D'Errico clash in the classical confrontation that pitted arch rivals for the first time ever; 8500 saw the game.

Soon after Konstanty's arrival, Haase accepted a post with the professional Atlanta Chiefs and left Oyaron Hill.

Al Miller, a Pennsylvania Dutchman who had been coaching at New Paltz State, arrived to take over the coaching ranks and Hartwick's success became even greater, climaxed by the November, 1970 game at Edwardsville, Ill. when Hartwick lost 1-0 to St. Louis, the eventual national champion. Hartwick's stature was unquestioned because the Warriors could just as well have won that game as lost it.

State on the Rise

During the tumult and the shouting on one of Oneonta's hills, a quiet transformation was taking place on the other where Oneonta State's team was building. Oneonta's soccer program under Garth Stam, at 6-6 probably the tallest coach in the nation, had always been successful. But the State University Conference wasn't considered among the best in the nation and its teams didn't really get much consideration when tournament time came around.

But in 1971, the undefeated Oneonta team easily won the state championship. Foreign players dotted the State roster as Stam and some able aides had scoured the world for talent under a foreign-student aid program. Hartwick had used players from Gambia, Chile, Greece, Italy, Portugal, Jamaica and England—not to mention Finland and Holland and Canada—and now players from far away places were dotting the Oneonta State roster.

The 1971 Oneonta team was uninvited to any tournament while Hartwick went on again to the national university division tournament and bowed to Harvard 4-1 in the quarter-finals.

State players, coaches and fans wer irked by what they considered a major oversight and they wanted so badly to play Hartwick. They had, in fact asked over and over for three season for an official game against Hartwick But Konstanty firmly ruled against is saying he didn't want trouble over game and citing the ideal situation is which these teams could scrimmag one another in practice sessions. Howas backed by school administrators

But wheels were turning outside of Oneonta, wheels which would eventually get moving to take the decision as to whether or not to play Oneonta State out of Konstanty's hands.

Two Tournaments

The ruling forces of the NCAA were setting up, for the first time, a college division tournament in addition to the university division tournament in which Hartwick had been competing in past years. Roughly, the NCAA divided into "college" and "university" divisions basically by enrollment, the university division being made up of larger schools.

So it came about that the college division national championship soccer tournament was established in 1972 and, as expected, Hartwick had a fine season and was picked for the tournament.

Much sought after, but not necessarily expected because of the performance of the previous year, was a bid for Onconta State. But the Onconta team had beefed up its schedule for the regular season, had played very well and impressed tournament selectors. The bid was forthcoming and Onconta State fans were ecstatic. At last, they were going to meet The Wick on the soccer pitch for real and not for practice.

But there were obstacles in both paths toward the long awaited meet-

It's a pile driver in the Oneonta State goalmouth during the Oneonta State-Hartwick "derby" last December.

nece

ing between Hartwick and Oneonta State. Hartwick had to play a strong Brockport State team and Oneonta had to play Adelphi, another very strong entry.

Hartwick, in the mud and snow, disposed of Brockport in a beautifully played, extremely physical 2-1 game and now turned to await the Adelphi-Oneonta result.

It was a long wait.

Oneonta and Adelphi battled on through a long afternoon the same Saturday Hartwick had beaten Brockport. Oneonta couldn't get the winning tally, nor could Adelphi and, after six overtimes, the game ended in a 1-1 tie. It was rescheduled for Wednesday and Oneonta State fans, Hartwicks fans and a breathless city had to wait four more days to see if the long awaited match would, indeed, take place.

When Oneonta went all the way to Garden City, L.I. Wednesday to play again, it was a different team. Somehow, the Red Dragons had come of age. They had found that they belonged in tournament competition, they had not disgraced themselves with a poor showing in tournament play against a tourney-wise team like Adelphi.

On that fateful Wednesday last November, it was a veteran Adelphi team which was embarassed. Oneonta State ran over, around and through Adelphi for a smashing 6-0 victory and, incredibly, the Oneonta-Hartwick game was on at last.

The Day of Reckoning

The game was scheduled for Oneonta's downtown baseball stadium on the following Monday. Saturday, it was said, was too soon for Onconta State after two long trips and two games earning the right to go against Hartwick. (Secretly, too, it was felt there might be less trouble on a Monday because many would be studying or working or pursuing normal weekday endeavors.)

The major of this market-place city of 17,000 officially proclaimed the day of the game "Soccer Day" and joined the police force in bracing for the worst.

Arguments waxed loud and long in the downtown bistros and fans of both teams, with enthusiasm brought on by a bit of over-indulgence in the excitement of the moment, wagered heavily on the outcome.

"No way," said Hartwick fans, "you guys are ready for tournament-wise Hartwick. We've been there before."

"Baloney" said the Oneonta fans.

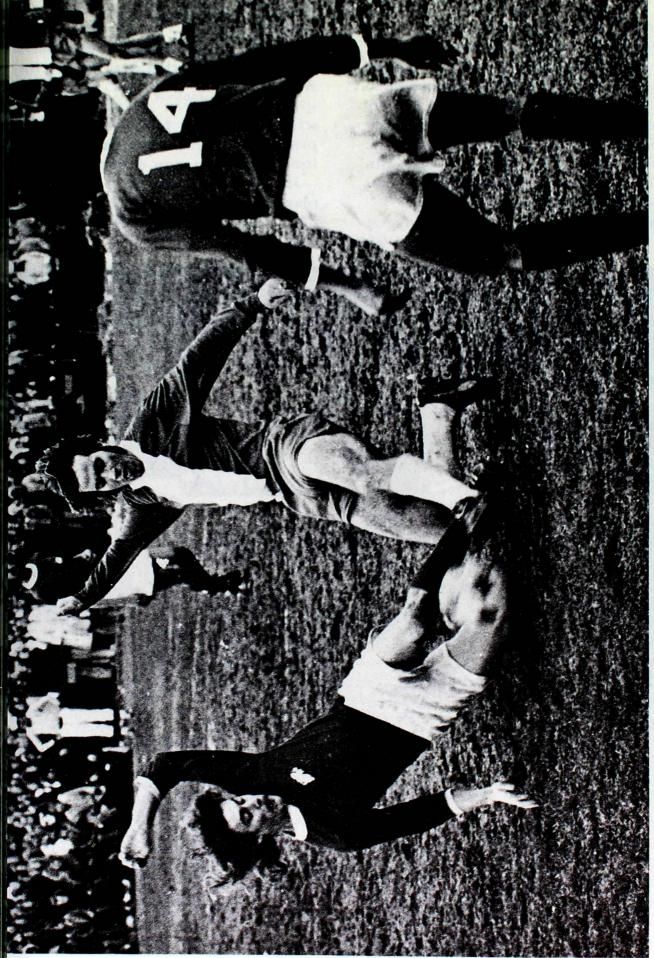

"It's just that we have been overlooked before. Now we'll get our chance."

Weekend snow helped cloud the picture and people were upset. But the snow produced a hint of things to come—good things. State and Hartwick students and officials worked together along with city officials to get the field ready and ready it was when the 1-p.m. game time arrived.

Those who thought Monday scheduling would hold down the crowd were wrong. By the opening kickoff, there were more than 7,000 on hand. This on a Monday in a small city whose very existence depends upon "minding the store" or being around to pull teeth, or prescribe medicine or counsel a client.

There were no problems, no fisticuffs, no incidents of any kind and the numerous police on hand for the game relaxed as it wore on.

The game itself was something to behold. Oneonta State dominated from the first whistle and Hartwick was simply never in it as Oneonta outran, outhustled, outshot and outplayed the startled Warriors. The final score was 3-0 and it might have been 6-0 had not Hartwick keeper Steve Jamison turned in an outstanding game.

Oneonta State's Dave North (left) and Hartwick's Brendan Keenan confront each other at midfield, as crowd of 8,000 looks on in background.

For Hartwick, the season was over. For the State team, savoring its acendancy to the throne so long occupied by Hartwick, there remained a victory over Springfield College, a smashing win over Chico State and then the heartbreaking 1-0 loss to Southern Illinois on the SI field in the national championship game.

And so the city of Oneonta's biggest day in the soccer sun came and went. If it did nothing else, it convinced an awful lot of people that soccer is a wonderful game, that it is here to stay. And it showed a lot of people that sports competition between the two schools could be run off without unpleasant incidents and that the sport itself is the common denominator.

It was quite a day for State, for the players and fans, for the city and—perhaps most important—for soccer itself.

A Giant Step in the Right Direction

by JUD MAGRIN

THE first annual Senior Soccer Bowl game played at Showalter Field in Winter Park, Fla. was a giant step in the right direction for soccer in America, particularily on the collegiate level.

The game was an introduction to Tangerine Bowl Week in Orlando, Fla. and perhaps for the first time college soccer was given the coverage and exposure it has deserved.

In my experience in covering the game in one of the hottest soccer towns in the United States, Oneonta, it was the first time the public relations people and the media saw eye to eye.

The coverage by Orlando and other area newspapers, radio and television stations, was excellent and officials of the game were so pleased with the affair that they announced on the spot the game will be played again this year.

Presiding officer at Winter Park was Wayne Sunderland, past president of the Intercollegiate Soccer-Football Association of America. He doubles as mayor of Massapequa, Long Island, New York and athletic director of Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, New York.

Sunderland said that much was learned in this first experience of pitting the best senior collegians in the East against their counterparts from the West and he felt this winter, the selection process will be done in a much broader manner.

But the seniors picked for the first contest were certainly representative as shown by the number that has gone into the professional ranks. First in mind is Bob Rigby, the outstanding goalkeeper that played at East Stroudsburg State, Pa. He now is a starting and best goalkeeper in the North American Soccer League with the Philadelphia Atoms, coached by Al Miller, formerly of Hartwick College, Oneonta.

Last fall Miller and Hartwick played at East Stroudsburg and they drew, 0-0, and at that time Miller was convinced about Rigby's talent. He drafted him number one in February.

Another senior who is now playing outstanding ball in the NASL is Andy Rymarczuk out of Penn State University. He recently signed with the Rochester Lancers and has taken over the leadership role in their attack.

Several other players were drafted including Chris Papaganias of Harvard University who went to the Montreal Olympiques. Willie Straub of Penn University is starting for Montreal, as is Bob Smith of Rider College for the Atoms at right back.

The Senior Bowl game was a contrast in styles with the East winning, 2-0. The East played short passes, finesse soccer whereas the West tried to penetrate with long passes, hoping for the breakaway.

Dennis Wit, of Loyola of Baltimore, and Rymarczuk were the mainstays in the East attack with midfielder Herb Austin of New York University anchoring the attack and defense. Austin, drafted by the New York Cosmos was named most valuable player at the game.

Garth Stam of Oneonta State, the runnersup to Southern Illinois University in the NCAA college division national tournament, coached the East while Russ Carr of Westmont, NAIA champs, coached the West. Gordy Howell, soccer coach at Rollins College in Winter Park, served as host and assistant to Stam.

Next year the Senior Soccer Bowl game promises to be bigger and better and have a larger crowd than the 2500 at last December's contest.

If members of the media and respective college public relations direcors can take the Senior Bowl as an example, soccer will make great strides this season.

ALASKA

THREE years of effort were rewarded last year when the U.S. Soccer Football Association held its 56th annual convention in Anchorage, Alaska's largest city. And a whopping session it was, too, with one of the largest delegations ever to register and the fun and games that went with it.

President Jim McGuire now has what may well be one of the most unique convention mementos in the world—a fur soccer ball, crafted by Walter Zwickler, and presented at the annual banquet by state Association President Dave Schmidt. A raffle for a fur coat yielded not one, but two prizes, one to Irma Miller who won a real Alaskan fur parky, and a second fur coat to another delegate. Another delegate from out of state, one of the youngest at the convention, was all a winner—of a round-trip ticket about Alaska's flag line, Wien Airlines, the far north community of Barrow While our memories of names growdim, no one in the Alaska Association will forget the good fellowship at the great time we had at the convetion.

Other activities continued during our short summer season as usual, with GSC Anchorage again proving them selves top team in the league by taking first place.

GSC also copped the Hans Aur Memorial Trophy, established by the association in memory of a long-time soccer player and organizer in Alask Olav Liland, left, secretary of the Alaska State Soccer Football Association, presents the round trip ticket for two to Larry Yensen of Springfield, Mass. The ticket for a three-day trip to Poin Barrow, the farthest north community in North America, was just one of the features of the 56th annual U.S. Soccer Football Association convention held last July in Anchorage, Alaska.

The Cougars won 13 games, lost two, and tied one—with 60 goals for and 17 against—for a total of 27 points. They have still, at time of writing of this report, one more game to play to up, won the junior division championship. The juniors are composed of eight teams and the initial championship was won by this season's runnerup.

A record of 13 wins and a tie—with 74 goals for and 11 against—for a total of 27 points was compiled by Fortuna. Phoenix Country Day School had 11 wins, two losses, and one tie, with 73 goals for and 22 against, for a total of 23 points.

Arizona United finished third and represented Arizona in the National Junior Challenge Cup by virtue of a big upset win over Fortuna in the Arizona State Cup.

The junior division league championship trophy was presented by the German Air Force, and any team winning it for three straight years will retain it permanently. The German Air Force will then donate another trophy.

Juveniles

Ages 8 through 14. Our juveniles started the 1972-73 season with great enthusiasm. The Phoenix Junior Soccer League has registered 614 boys. The Westown Soccer Club was presented 4 trophies on trophy presentation day. Their teams the Jaguars division C—ages 12 through 14 and the Rockets II division D ages 10 through 12 besides being league champions won also both the Knock-Out cup championships.

From the division E ages 8 through 10 the Thunderbirds from the Stalight Soccer Club became league charpion and the Tigers from the Sunn slope Soccer club won the Knock-outcup.

Annual Report

In spite of all difficulties we and having, we are making progress in Arizona. The interest in the game of soccer has increased, especially on the youth level, even girls are starting to play on a trial basis.

Many parents, bitten by the socce bug are starting to coach and help of in transportation. We have registere in total 226 Seniors, 155 juniors an 614 juveniles.

On the college level, soccer is als becoming very active. Coming Apr there will be an Intercollegiate Tourn ament organized by the Arizona Stat University.

The yearly soccer event between the German Air Force Student Pilots and the American Air Force Academy of Colorado has become like a traditionand is battled for the benefit of the Glendale Boys Club.

Our biggest problem are the referees. Right now we have only USSA licensed referees in Phoenix and 1 in Tucson.

CALIFORNIA—NORTH

I F THE previous decade in Northern California was known for its growth, certainly 1972 will be noted for its growing pains. In every aspect of soccer, growth was being represented in increasing registrations and affiliated teams. The computerized system adopted in previous years for registration of affiliated youth player is now being adapted for senior registrations as well. The increased work load has necessitated a permanent registration form with annual renewals now under development.

1973 OFFICIAL YEARBOOK

Affiliated youth registrants topped 10,000, while senior players went over the 3,400 mark. In 1953 there were four youth teams centered in San Francisco, now there are 16 leagues, 795 teams and 12,047 players. Nearly 5000 players are in one tri-valley area, a suburban community. The quality of play can be seen in the finalists of the 1972 youth State Cup; Juventus of Redwood City, under 18; Livermore Atomic Neutrons, under 16; Dublin United, under 14; and Ballistic United of Pleasanton, under 12.

Two thousand youngsters play in the Fresno area, thanks to the involvement of one man, Harold Young, and 800 fans turned out for the local finals. End of year banquets reflected growth as 1300 turned out in Santa Rosa and 800 in Petaluma.

Youth level soccer showed great promise on the International scene as visitors from Braunschweig, Germany, played five games with allstar squads from each of five leagues. An opening 2-2 tie in San Francisco impressed, and then the Germans won with scores reflecting the differing experience levels of the leagues, almost in proportion. Good crowds turned out on each occasion.

Currently each of ten districts are assembling allstar teams competing in the four under-18 age brackets, to play on a home and away basis this coming summer. Eventually a final select team will be chosen to represent Northern California and face any visiting select teams.

On the school level, growing pains have caused some friction with school and amateur soccer, but these problems are being resolved as each begins to sense the others problems. Only San Francisco has had school soccer since 1916. In 1953 there were nine high schools playing the game, all in San Francisco. Now there are a record 187, plus some sophomore an junior varsity squads. American foo ball coaches are beginning to complain that soccer is taking away som of their "material." In San Jose alone there are now more than 50 high schools playing the round ball game.

San Jose also reflects the changing strength of the game in other levels. The S.J. Grenadiers took the National Amateur Cup in a 1-0 game over San Francisco's Concordia, then beat So Cal's San Pedro Slavic in penalty kick for the state title. In State Cup competition the San Jose Portuguese took the Northern California title, but bowed to the Los Angeles Montebello team, 4-1, in a two game set. Four major soccer fields are under way in San Jose, with the Spartan Stadium being modified to accommodate soccer at a pro level.

At the National Open Cup level, Concordia topped the Greek Americans, with Olympic players on both teams, and Olympiad Mike Ivanow won his game as goalie by booting in the winning penalty kick. Concordia went on to beat the Seattle Vikings, 6-1, but lost to the Los Angeles Yugoslavs, 4-1, total goals.

Major events of the year included the most successful Olympic match of the national series as the USA tied Mexico, 2-2, in San Francisco in May, before 12,600 fans. An international match between Aberdeen and Wolverhampton a few weeks latter drew only about 1500, who witnessed a 3-1 win for the Scots. Yet another similar event brought out 26,000 in July. The draw was Pele and Santos who made mincemeat of Universidad of Mexico City, but all eyes were on the Black Pearl.

In September a team composed of allstars, but mainly San Jose Kings, lost a squeaker, 2-1, to Guadalajara, while a similar squad in Sacramento, the Senators, were trounced 8-1. At-endance was 1100 and 3500 respectively. The same teams had met the onlympic team in tune up matches in son lugust, with the Kings winning 3-1 and the Senators losing 1-3. In Northical League finals, the Oakland Rams and ralked off with the trophy.

An international match with Macerel abee in August, with Northern Caliion prnia AllStars, composed mainly of Satars of San Francisco's first division to some the Fall, played rings around kid he visitors resulting in a walkoff and con absequent legal repercussions.

The city of Oakland saw the soccer by ight for the first time and passed a belt ond issue which included more fields for nd an eventual major soccer facility.

By it a clinic for recreation people guardium ntees that soccer will be heading up here to match the other major sports.

At the collegiate level the University of California saw 42 turn out for menoractice, thus matching the growth both aking place in the high schools. USF umbled twice before visiting St. Louis, ignoral a good crowd in Marin County and it worthwhile. The same area aw 1800 turn out for an exhibition as U.C. beat Stanford 4-2. San Jose State turned out its usual high power occer, with more for the future promised.

Women made their mark in Northern California in 1972 and teams with names like the Bod Squad and the Barbary Coast Rovers added spice to the news. Although recognition of women in soccer is here, administratively much work needs to be done to bull these teams together, and operate continuously.

In amateur league competition Concordia took San Francisco's honors, with the Sons of Italy moving up to the first division, Xochimilco topped the Central California league, Santa Rosa Atlas took the North Bay Soccer League, St. Bernard was champ of the East Bay League, the fastest growing senior league, and the Peninsula League saw the Grenadiers come in first. The KGST team of Fresno won in the San Joaquin Valley.

The Central California Soccer Football League, whose jurisdiction extends over most of the northern section of the Great Central Valley, expanded to twenty-seven teams for the 1972-1973 season. Ten teams in the first division, and seventeen—divided into two groups—in the second division were vying for their respective titles.

In the first division, three teams battled for the top spot. Defending champion Luis's Soccer Club, Stockton's Xochimilco, and City Cup champion Davis S.C., fresh from the second division, were the teams destined to bring the championship race down to the wire.

In the second division, the North group turned into a two-team battle between newly-created teams, British-American Club and Campos S.C. of Roseville, while in the South group, Acoriano of Modesto was the runaway victor.

The new year of 1973 saw some other finales for the record books. In National Amateur Cup action the Grenadiers of San Jose repeated their Northern California supremacy by knocking off the Davis Senators, but missed out on the Open Cup area title, losing to same town rivals, the San Jose Portuguese.

The Portuguese and Grenadiers both won over their Washington counterparts, then traveled to Southern California where the Portuguese saw their hopes vanish to the Maccabees on total goals, in a two game home and home series. The Grenadiers made short work of their L.A. rival and were still going strong at this writing.

In San Francisco, the Greek Americans won with the help of the Sons of Italy who had a chance to capture the title, as they had an energy crisis at season end. The East Bay saw Luso American crowned in the growing, and growing stronger, league.

Santa Rosa Atlas picked off the top spot in the North Bay League amidst some confusion which left a cloud over the final standings.

TAKING a look at the soccer scene in SoCal from a perspective, one would say that the mood now is one of quiet, hopeful optimism and anticipation. This does contrast with last year's more boisterous trend towards unrestrained growth and development—it is as if we have reached a plateau and have turned our efforts towards consolidation of our gains, at least for the moment.

Of course, soccer has been much less visible this year. Compared to the 1971-72 season, which witnessed numerous crowd-pleasing international spectaculars in the L.A. Coliseum, there have been hardly any so far this season. The only exception was the World Cup qualifying, or should I say disqualifying match between the U.S. and Mexico.

On the professional level, we are still without a pro franchise team on the West coast. We watch with envy as other cities, such as New York, Miami and Dallas, to name only a few, have a pro season to look forward to enjoying. We are encouraged by the progress being made in the NASL and ASL and hope that L.A. will soon see a revival of its own professional program. The grapevine indicates that there have been talks with the pros by several L.A. groups interested in a local franchise for the 73-74 season.

The traditional senior program has shown some growth and stabilization in the past year. The association (which changed its name again, this time to California Soccer Association South, Inc.) has added one league to its roster, which now numbers leagues. The newest addition is the United Soccer League, not to be confused with the United American Soccer League. The U.S.L. has concentrated primarily upon the under-23 age group, and plans to specialize it intermediate program even more with an under-19 group.

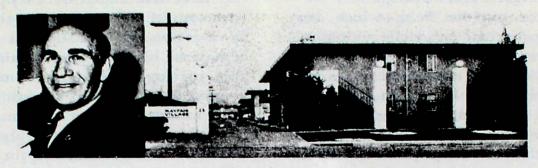

The largest of Southland leagues is the California Soccer League, which numbers 79 senior teams, 26 junior teams and 14 girls teams. This is phenomenal growth for a league which started in May, 1958 with only 7 teams total. In honor of its 15th anniversary, this Cinco de Mayo (May 5)) a game was staged between the Mexican National Amateur All-Stars and the CSL All-Stars in Los Angeles.

The Pacific Soccer League took top honors in the SoCal leg of the National Amateur Cup with the victory of D.S.V. Danubia, while the Greater Los Angeles League captured the SoCal title in the National Open Cup, courtesy Maccabee A.C.

In the area of referees, the CSA-S now has 151 qualified refs affiliated. A program consisting of testing for physical fitness and technical knowledge is Violence on the field, which has been a perennial headache to organized soccer, has been on the decrease since the CSA-S Trial Board began imposing stiff sentences on all convicted offenders, including the suspension of the whole team for a given number of playing dates when physical assault is involved.

Growth has also been pronounced in un-affiliated soccer groups, both senior and junior. The Los Angeles Municipal League has 45 senior teams playing highly organized ball in city facilities, and recognizes the Trial Board rulings of the CSA-S.

The junior branch of the CSA-S is the Southern California Youth Soccer Organization, founded in 1969 and now having five member leagues: California S.L.; Pacific S.L.; Golden State S.L.; West Valley S.L. and San Diego County S.L. Some 3000 boys from age 8 to 19 play a six month season each year, followed by several months of State Challenge Cup and SCYSO Tournament of Champions (All-Star) games.

A new trend has been developing in clubs in recent years: combining summer vacation with exhibition matches between youth teams in distant cities and states. Boys who might not have had much of an opportunity to travel before thus get the benefit of seeing the sights of this magnificent land of ours, plus gaining valuable playing experience. Some clubs, forming car caravans or renting a bus, thus round out their season just in time to begin another in September.

The youth movement in SoCal, which was organized in a big way only as recently as 1964, is now beginning to pick up steam at the high school level. Both the County and City schools have varsity programs in soccer; the city schools just having completed their second season. It is rumored that there are plans to initiate soccer in the junior highs as well next year.

Looking ahead slightly, next year will see many southlanders travelling to Germany for the World Cup games. The SCYSO is one group organizing a charter package, which has made it possible for a number of families to travel together for this adventure to the pinnacle of soccer excitement.

COLORADO

S INCE the beginning of 1972, soccer activity in Colorado has achieved dramatic growth in both variety and size. Clearly the most significant single event was the recent decision of the Colorado High School Activities Association to approve soccer as a sanctioned activity beginning the fall season of 1973. After many years of unsuccessful effort to obtain sanctioned status for soccer, this decision finally puts soccer in the same class as football, basketball, and baseball on the high school level. It is hoped that a state championship will be held in 1973 and it is predicted that the number of high school teams will increase dramatically in the next five years.

Another significant development in Colorado is the mushrooming expansion of women's soccer. The number of girls playing soccer in the Denver metropolitan area has increased manyfold over previous years, and interest is running high for establishment of similar programs in the outlying regions of Colorado. Youth development in such communities as Colorado Springs, Pueblo, and the small mountain comunities of Vail and Aspen has already taken significant strides, and the supplemental girls' programs provide added initiative for expansion. Complimenting this youth development, a mountain soccer camp was held in the sumer of 1972 for the first time by Artie Wachter, a holder of the USSFA "C" Coaching Certificate. The three-week long camp with one week sessions, was well received by youngsters throughout the state. Such innovations as these have helped to establish a program of more than 7,000 junior players in the Denver metropolitan area under the auspices of the Colorado Junior Soccer Assn.

Also symbolic of the expansion of the kinds of activities in Colorado is the service by Captain Eichen of the Air Force Academy as the college representative to the Board of Trustees of the Colorado State Soccer Association. This liaison with the colleges has proven highly beneficial in maintaining coordination between college programs and those run by the state association. Also symbolic is a pilot program instituted by this association for recreational soccer. In this pilot program, much of the red tape and expenses ordinarily involved in playing soccer are eliminated. The teams, however, are not eligible for the state championship, international games, or national cups. The preliminary results of this program indicate that a large number of recreational teams have been formed which would not have been formed except for the simplified requirements and that none of this has been at the expense of the expansion of the championship level of soccer.

Of course, not everything in Colorado was new. The Denver Kickers successfully defended their state championship by defeating the Denver Turners 6-2 in the spring of 1972. The Denver Turners had advanced to the finals by winning the championship for the fall season, whereas the Denver Kickers had advanced by winning the championship in the spring season. The Denver Kickers, however, were unable to defend their Colorado State Cup, as they fell 2-1 to Cafe Promenade in February, 1972. The results for the 1972-1973 soccer season are not available at the time of this report because extremely adverse weather has created major postponement of the entire season. The Denver Kickers, however, appear to have the inside track for the state championship although the championship teams appear to be well balanced with seldom more than one or two goals' difference in the games. Colorado is particularly proud that the Kickers defeated Kutis 3-2 in the National Challenge Cup.

The summer of 1972 saw a number of well-run international games in Denver and Colorado Springs. In general, the local teams fared well against their foreign competitors and each game provided a good attraction for all local soccer buffs.

Colorado was particularly interested in the success of the U.S. Olympic Soccer Team as one of the players, Mike Flater, was successful in making the team.

In general, the outlook for soccer in Colorado is bright, with further expansion of activities and numbers of players expected for next year.

CONNECTICUT

THE Connecticut State Soccer Football Association (CSSFA) had forty teams participating in the 1971-72 season.

In the CSSFA State Cup competition, 15 teams entered the Major Cup, and 16 the Minor Cup.

Bridgeport United won the Major Cup when Ludlow Lusitano gave up in the second game of the two game home-and-home finals. After a 3-3 game in Ludlow, the Massachusetts combine foreited the return game in Bridgeport.

The Minor Cup went to Southington SC after a 2-1 overtime triumph over newly promoted Our Lady of Fatima, from Bridgeport.

Hellenic SC, the Greek soccer power from Hartford, won the National Soccer League of Connecticut A Division crown from New Haven City which had won the A Division, South title. After a 4-2 win at home, Hellenic won the return game in New Haven, by forfeit, when the Elm City club could not field a team on July 16.

Promoted to the A Division were Willimantic SC (which changed its name to Connecticut Wildcats), Waterbury Portuguese and Bridgeport Our Lady of Fatima. Hartford Peru and Danbury United were relegated to the B Division and, when Stamford Blue Stars chose to play in the B Division, New Britain SC was allowed to remain in the A Division.

Hellenic was also the New England finalist in the National Challenge Cup (Dewar Cup) losing by one goal to the German-Hungarians in New York, April 23, 1972. In New Bedford, Mass., on March 26, the Portuguese-Americans blanked Willimantic SC, 2-0, knocking the Thread City club out of National Amateur Cup.

Pat Delaney, of Manchester, became

President of the CSSFA, when Joe Morrone resigned at the July Annual General Meeting but when Delaney also resigned, March 23, 1973, Veep Mike Bosson, of Oakdale, advanced to the presidency.

James, Gracie, Manchester resident, is President of the National Soccer League and has firm grip on the reins in guiding the far-flung league which is functioning more smoothly than it has in over 20 years.

A number of clubs elected not to field teams for the 1972-73 season and a few new ones came on the scene so that there were 36 for September 1972.

Presently Hellenic and New Haven City are leading the A Division, North and South, respectively, and the B Division, which is split into two sections, has Hartford Inca on top in the North and Stamford Blue Stars ahead in the South.

In the State Cup (Major), Hellenic, New Britain SC and Connecticut Wildcats are already in the semi-finals awaiting the winner between New Haven City and Hartford Italian-American Stars to complete the semi-final round. Hartford Inca, Southington, New Haven Portuguese and Bridgeport Inter are the semi-nalists in the Minor State Cup.

Big news on the Connecticut soccer stage is the move by the Connecticut Wildcats into the professional American Soccer League. The Wildcats plan to play their home games in Hartford and have obtained a pro coach from the Netherlands, Rene Koremans, to direct their efforts.

The CSSFA has an All Star Senior team which is coached by Armand Dikranian, soccer coach at Southern Connecticut State College while the CSSFA Junior squad is directed by Warren Swanson, from Mitchell College, and the hard-working Junior Commissioner, Alastair Bell.

The Junior movement is showing steady and encouraging growth with more teams joining each year. Westport SC won the Junior title last year with 14 wins and no losses and represented the CSSFA in the National Junior Cup losing to Blau Weiss Gottschee, 3-0, in New York, April 30, 1972. Westport, coached by Jimmy Kuhlmann, is the Junior finalist from CSSFA again this season, the fourth year in a row.

Association's three senior leagues are: The Central Pennsylvania Soccer League, The Football League of the Associated Cricket Clubs, and the United Soccer League, with 10, 14, and 440 teams, in that order. In addition, a large number of teams from the divisions participated in the United League's indoor winter soccer league again this year. Intermediate competition is gaining popularity among the 19-20 age group with additional teams registered in this program under the United League auspices.

The Junior leagues, Delco with 913 players in 49 teams, Intercounty with 2,146 players in 135 teams, and the United Junior Soccer League with 1,665 players in 81 teams, is divided into Junior, Midget, PeeWee, Novice, Mini, and girls (Junior and Senior) and is currently enjoying almost year-round popularity.

The referees' association has 103 active members, making it one of the largest and finest in the country. These men cover the many Saturday and Sunday matches throughout the year for our six leagues and innumerable evening and weekend games between our clubs and those of other associations and cover a great array of all-star and cup matches as well, as this association is active on all levels of play.

With Philadelphia becoming a great soccer center, not only on the amateur level, but among recreation departments, schools, colleges, semi-pro, and professionals, it seems likely that each can compliment the others in the growth of the game.

FLORIDA

A MATEUR soccer continued to grow in Florida with the creation of a new Adult League, The Gold Coast League, consisting of 6 teams. The Florida West Coast League and Central Florida reorganized and promise to expand the growth of soccer all over the state. The South Florida League continued to grow to 11 teams.

The real growth has been in the under-18 age groups. High schools in South Florida adopted the sport officially and added a new dimension to the already flourishing youth soccer programs presented by the ICAC and Greater Hollywood Soccer League. The Optimist Clubs in Dade County have formed a Soccer Conference to provide 7 and unders through 18 and under with the opportunity to play during the coming summer. For the first time we are beginning to register players in these age groups.

Florida's first entry in the National Junior Cup, Jacksonville Bishop Kenney, was defeated by the Dallas entry 2-0 in the regional final at the Gator Bowl. This really awakened interest in the Junior Cup and we expect spirited competition among Florida teams next year and, of course, greatly increased registration of junior players.

On the college scene the highlight of the year was the NCAA championships held for the second year in the Orange Bowl. While attendance was disappointingly low, the games themselves were exciting and new fans were gained.

Miami-Dade Junior College (South Campus) proved to be the local champions in NJCAA competition and went on to make a fine showing in the National finals.

The addition of Florida Technicological University and Florida International University has increased the number of major schools playing soccer. Their soccer coaches have been very involved with development both at the junior and junior college level in their local areas. Al Miller, now of the Philadelphia Atoms, came down in March to assist the State Association put on its first youth soccer clinic. Al was assisted by coaches from all our junior programs, junior and senior colleges. Although the turnout was small, Al Miller and his assistants did a first class job. The boys and girls involved really took it seriously and were very enthusiastic.

The Miami Gatos came off a disappointing season but reorganized and have been playing exciting soccer. Now known as the Miami Toros, they are playing their home games in the Orange Bowl.

We are looking to the 1973-4 season with eagerness. Youth clinics, referee clinics and coaching clinics are planned while our whole thrust from the State Association will be to register youth and provide them, in return, with qualified coaches and referees.

GEORGIA

WITH the exception of the Georgia High School Association soccer teams, most of the soccer activity in our state is in the metropolitan area.

At the amateur level, under the capable leadership of Terry Radford as president of the Atlanta District Amateur Soccer League, we play two seasons: summer (June thru August) and fall (Sept. thru March). A knockout cup competition is run concurrent with the regular season. Other officers of the league are: Vice-pres., Kurt Schlenz; Secretary, Mrs. Bonnie Joseph; Treasurer, Ed Caswell. We had a total of 390 players registered during 1972. They represent 11 First Div. teams and 13 Second Div. teams.

In Georgia our junior soccer (ages 19-16) is completely independent of the high schools. In fact there are Georgia High School Association rules we must abide by that seem unique unto our state. For instance :no more than 5 varsity players from any one school may be on a junior team. Also, no player may participate in an outside team if he is currently participating in any high school varsity sport. Since high school soccer here in our state follows the football season and is played from Nov. to the end of Feb. our entries to the National Jr. Cup Competition are based on the previous seasons teams. That is, the top teams in August are those who enter Jr. Cup for Dec. 31 deadline. Not until after the high school season ends can the teams be organized-thus the teams entered in Jr. Cup competition have one month to practice and play for the state title in the Jr. Cup competition by April 1!

The juniors play a split season of April to June, June thru Aug. with registration taking place in June (as in accordance with USSFA year). We have this split season in order to include in June those high school players who could not register in spring due to high track, baseball, etc. The boys registered on a team at end of summer are technically registered with the team when following spring season starts which sometimes causes problems when boys have decided they would rather play on another team in the spring. It's really too bad that Georgia Junior soccer has to be so differently organized than the rest of the nation, but we are looking forward to the 1973 year with some reservations about how the new 15-16 year old intermediate age division of Greater Atlanta Youth Soccer League will affect our league. (Previously all 16 year olds were Jrs.). As a one year old league we were not strong enough nor organized enough yet to divide into 2 age divisions within the Jrs. (15-16) (17-19), so the decision was made by the youth league to let the 16 year olds decided which league they wished to join-Georgia Junior Soccer League or the youth league. We in the Jr. League feel that it is a step backward and will hinder our growth.

The officers for 1972 were re-elected for 1973 and are: Pres., Marion Joseph; Vice Pres., Hugo Greiner; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Vera George. by Bonnie Joseph

Referees' Report

The Georgia Soccer Referee Association President, Bob Donahue reports that in 1972 the total number of U.S.S.F.A. registered referees in the state was 88. Two training courses are underway, conducted Training Committee, Bob G.S.R.A. Chairman. These Sumpter, have enrolled 44 prospective new members of G.S.R.A. which would bring the total of U.S.S.F.A. registered referees in the state of Georgia to 132. Four members of G.S.R.A. are presently members of the N.A.S.L. officiating staff: Bob Sumpter, Fred Martin, Reiner Gerdes, and Bob Donahue. election of officers of G.S.R.A. for the year of 1973-74 was held on March 14, 1973. The newly elected President is Fred S. Martin under whose leadership G.S.R.A. is certain to continue its prosperity in growth and development of highly qualified officials to service all of the leagues in this area.

High School Program

The growth of the high school program continues at a steady pace. In 1966, the year the State High School Association included soccer in their program, there were 20 teams. Five years later, 1970, the number had doubled (43 teams) and this year (1973) there were 78 teams playing during the winter season and 12 teams playing during the fall season. Stats on scorers were compiled and reported several times during the season-61 per cent of those scoring scored 5 or more goals each during the regular season

In the Amateur Cup the Chicago Kickers appeared on their way to the Grand Final holding a 1-0 lead over an Jose Grenadiers with less than ifteen minutes to go, but the visiting Californians grabbed two opportunities and converted them to snatch a 2-1 vin away from the Kickers. More and more leagues and competitions are springing up in Illinois, nostly in Chicago and surrounding uburban areas. At one time the National Soccer League was the sole eague under the jurisdiction of the Ilinois Soccer Assn. Now there are our other leagues affiliated with the tate Association, and this past year he high schools conducted the FIRST Illinois State championship.

In addition to the National League, LASA (Chicago Latin American Socer Association) is in its second year of operation. Then there is the Great Lakes League, Western Illinois League and the Chicagoan League. Both Clasa and Great Lakes are off-shoots from the National League. The Western League is a summer league catering to high school and college players. The Chicagoan League operates in the Spring with high school players who wish soccer action not available in their schools.

More than 150 teams are registered in Illinois of which 100 are with the National League. 3500 registration forms, Senior and Junior, were filed during the past 12 months. There is still a shortage of referees with only about forty registered.

Divisional winners for 1972 in the NSL were Lions and Maroons in the Red & Blue sections of the Major Division. Green-White and Hercules in the First Division, Juventus in the Second Division, Chicago Stars and U.S. 72 in the Third. All winners were promoted.

Abe Korsower was elected President of the NSL, succeeding George Fishwick who filled in temporarily for an eight month period early in 1972. Ray Gill was named secretary-treasurer and Joe Georg vice-president. Board members are Sam Carras, John Elezovich, Bob Bettin and John Zdebski.

The CLASA League under the guidance of Ruben Nunez and Leo Hernandez placed all clubs in a competition at the start of 1972, then divided the teams into First and Second Divisions according to their finish.

Ayutla took the First Division over Tala, and San Luis edged Purification for the Second Division crown.

Highland Parkers took top honors in the Great Lakes League, with Waukegan Marathon runners-up. Leonidas Fardelos serves as President, Louis Vignocchi as secretary and Domenic Ori as technical manager.

1973 OFFICIAL YEARBOOK

The Chicagoland League was divided into three sections. Lakers took West honors, Lyons Township South honors and Sehn gained the North Division title. Father Jim Hoffman acts as secretary-treasurer and co-ordinator for this growing junior movement.

The fifty team Junior and Juvenile Division of the NSL led by Willi Nikolai, president, Edward Kositzki, secretary and board members Roman Zahoradnyj, Ted Mocny, Ed Skiba, Matt Taubel and Homer Ortego presented winning trophies at the fourth annual award dance held Feb. 3, 1973. Schwaben and the Lions were one-two in the Junior "A" bracket, with C.D.T. champions in the "B" section followed by Wisla. Sparta took Juvenile honors with Green-White as runners up in the "A" section. It was H-F United and Atlante in the "B" group. Green-White took the Midgets "A" crown with Sparta second, and in the "B" division Tabor Bombers were ahead of Real.

The NSL returned to their original home the Chicago Avenue Armory for the 1973 Indoor season. The two previous years at the Amphitheater under outside sponsors was not a financial success and the agreement was dissolved. The Indoor games were played Friday nights, and crowds were not as good as they were when played Sunday afternoons in the Armory. The NSL had to purchase artificial covering for the cement floor and the bright green color brightened up the effects. The Lions took the title with 16 points over the Kickers with eleven. Ten teams competed, playing 5-twenty-five minute senior games nightly and 3 Youth exhibitions early in the evening.

Three Chicago area high school teams reached the first Illinois High School championship play-offs, but Granite City took the title. The four finalists of the original field of 36 high schools met at Normal in November. Granite City stopped Senr Chicago Public School champion 4-and New Trier West beat La Grang 3-2 in the semi-finals. Granite Cit beat New Trier 2-1 in the final, and Senn took third place with a 4-2 wir over La Grange. The State Assn. again presented the Illinois High School All Americans with certificates of merit.

Chicago All-Stars were feted, with players Ed Murphy, Adolf Bachmeier Rudi Getzinger and Joey Gryzik presented with plaques for ten years of more as Chicago All-Stars and selection to US National teams. George Meyer All-Star coach for many years and Bill Hemmings for 26 years service as NSL President were also recipients of plaques.

The three original living founders of the Midwest Old Timers were honored at the oldtimers 20th annual banquet, Jach Maher, Alex Robb and Charlie Fencl. Eli Korer, D. J. Niotis and George Fishwick were also recognized for their services to soccer. The Old-timers also present trophies to the Illinois Junior champions. Al Hohertz is president, Niotis, vice-president and John Zdebski secretary. Other board members are Al Weiss, Paul Janec, Gene Petramale, Dr. Walter Jordanek, Eli Korer and Chuck Strachan.

During the past year live TV showings of international games in Europe were presented with prices high and a mixed reaction, depending on the countries playing and the excitement of the game. . . Frank Kracher, former veep of the USSFA keeping in touch by acting as secretary of the Illinois Trial Board. . . The great and renowned German coach Sepp Herberger and German International Uwe Seeler attended the annual German Clubs honor award night. . . Youth Indoor games were played Sunday mornings during the winter at Lake Forest Academy, with the host winning the title. . . . The Illinois Assn. invested over $3000 in equipment to make and seal Player I.D. cards. . . . Schwaben AC opened their new field, picnic grove and headquarters in Buffalo Grove. . . . Rams celebrated their 40th anniversary and Real FC their fifteenth.... The visit of foreign teams diminished, but we still got to see Santos and Pele twice, Aberdeen, Lazzio of Italy, Universitad of Mexico, Werder Bremen of Germany. The Chicago All-stars played Aberdeen to a 1-1 tie.

THE Louisiana Soccer Football Association progressed notably in 1972, particularly in four areas.

First, the Association experienced considerable success in its efforts to broaden the base of interest and participation in soccer from the Latin-

American community to the community at large. The names of all amateur teams bearing national names were changed to names more appropriate to Louisiana. The El-Salvador F.C., for example, is now registered as the Pelican F.C. Furthermore, the New Orleans Soccer Football League received its first application from a non-Latin team, the Westside S.C. Still further, the native talent in the school age group has progressed to the point that teams from Archbishop Rummel and Metairie Park Country Day, both consisting entirely of native Louisianians, placed 2nd and 3rd in the New Orleans Interscholastic League (Varsity Division).

Second, the Association has succeeded in adapting a more businesslike organization. A small office and appropriate filing system have been established by one of the officers. Improvements have also been made in frequency of communication and documentation of activity.

Third, the Association has made a significant attempt to become truly statewide in scope. The state has been divided into 6 districts and efforts are being made to acquire vice-presidents from each of these districts to oversee development. Mr. Terry Moore of Lake Charles has accepted the post of vice-president from the South West Louisiana District.

Fourth, the Association has made its first attempts to establish bantam soccer. An eight-team bantam league is being established in a suburb of New Orleans, and we hope to have numerous others in the near future. It is on the development of this area that our hopes for general development and expansion rest.

Besides these general areas of progress, we feel our report should include words of congratulations to the Hurricanes F.C., champions of the New Orleans Soccer Football League, Tulane F.C., champions of the Louisiana Col-

MARYLAND

COCCER in the Free State shows great improvement at all levels. It's estimated that 25,000 youngsters are playing the game in the Baltimore Metropolitan area and 40,000 in the entire State. Suddenly, more and more people want to get involved in the sport; from the parents who encourage their kids, to the two professional teams, namely the Bays and the Stars, and the tireless efforts of the State Association, Maryland Major Soccer League, churches, independent leagues, referees associations, Bureau of Recreation, schools, colleges and news media, to whom, all fans shoul give thanks, for they are the builders of soccer.

The State Association has finally opened its doors to everybody who wants to work, and the credit goes to Norman Grammer, its president. Under his leadership, a new policy was put into effect the same night he was elected; as a result, the old disease of personal frictions is being wiped out, more teams are participating in the Youth Cups, more organizations and leagues are joining the state family and the Association is regaining its respectability lost a long time ago.

A total of eight Cup Tournaments are organized by the Association, they are (listed by cup, class, 1972 champ):

Harry W. Rowland, Pros, Italia-Casa Biano; Harry S. Stewart, Amateurs, Italia-Casa Bianco; Danny Freeberger, 16-19 year olds, Italia-Casa Bianco; William Stubbins, 14-16 year olds, St. Elizabeth; John "Buck" Davidson, 12-14 year olds, Tom's Produce; Vernon Reese, 10-12 year olds, St. Elizabeth; Tom Maxwell, 8-12 year olds, Locust Point; Tom Connelly, Under 8.

Jim Karvellas, President of the Baltimore Bays Soccer Club, Inc., has done more for the prestige of Soccer in this part of the country than any other man or institution. It took him only a few months to show how to build a powerful organization from scratch, and less than two years to prove what soccer in this country needs to succeed.

The Bays played last year nine International games as an independent team compiling a record of 3 wins, 4 losses and 2 ties. The feature of their campaign was a 3-3 tie with the famous Dynamo Moscow before 17,000 fans, the largest crowd ever to watch a soccer game in Baltimore. This year the team will follow the same format expecting to increase the fans support.

The Baltimore Stars of the American League have merged with the Bays Corporation. It means that this move will give the league and soccer in general the kind of man needed, for better organization, and promotions in the person of Jim Karvellas who believes in doing things first class. Now our local kids have somewhere to go and dream about the day when they will be playing for the Stars and the Bays.

In the Maryland Major League also, changes for the better have been made. Delegates from the 18 teams separated in two divisions meet every month of the year to iron out their problems, and as a result, the standard of play, discipline on the playing field as well as the number of participants and public relations have improved greatly in the last two years. For the 1973-74 season, a record number of teams is expected to participate in league play, including entries from sections outside of the Baltimore city limits such as: Annapolis, Towson, Columbia, Fredrick, Bel Air, etc.

st

The Baltimore City Bureau of Recreation together with the Catholic Youth Organization, (CYO), deserve praise for the great job they do in promoting the game among youngsters. Several tournaments are staged every year under the direction of very dedicated people, and it's wonderful to watch kids of all ages chasing a soccer ball in almost all kinds of weather.

It's estimated that 90 per cent of all the schools and colleges in Maryland have soccer programs for boys, and some of them for girls. This institutions in competition, are represented only by the best players they have; but the interest and excitement they create, are bringing more and more followers to the games.

The growth of soccer all over the nation is tremendous, and the state of Maryland is among the leaders in promoting the sport at all levels. It's the job of many unselfish people who share a common dream: To place the U.S.A. first in the number one sport in the world.

MASSACHUSETTS

SINCE the formation of the Massachusetts Soccer Association in 1971 and its affiliation with U.S.S.F.A. in 1972, great strides have been made in reorganizing the existing stagnant setup and even greater strides are planned especially in Americanizing the sport and infiltrating the leagues with American born players, providing them with the exposure to top class soccer through the channels of television, the news media and exhibition games necessary to their own development.

A new more dynamic approach has been adopted and the first task, now complete, was to integrate all the separate, independent senior leagues into one league with four divisions, utilizing a 2 up and 2 down promotion and relegation system, thereby keeping together in one division the teams who are currently playing a similar standard and thus creating more exciting competition and maintaining interest at the bottom of the league as well as the top. The current standings of the Mass. Soccer Leagues first season are listed below. The next task is to assign the old Boston & District League a new role to provide a link between Juniors and Seniors in the form of an under 23 year old league. and future plans call for the formation of a colleage league to operate in Spring and supplement the season that is normally played in Fall.

Youth Soccer has grown in leaps and bounds and in the Boston Area Youth Soccer League expansion has grown from 9 teams in 1969, 24 in 1970, 48 in 1971, 69 in 1972 to a staggering 94 teams this year. The league operates in the Spring to complement the high school league in the Fall. To date the league is not affiliated with the USSFA but interest has been shown in USSFA plans to organize a national youth organization, separate from the senior body. This year a major step was made in the area of Referee Relations with the formation of the Massachusetts Soccer Referees Association to operate within the requirements as laid down by the USSFA.

The M.S.A. also has plans to maintain tighter control on the promotion and sponsoring of exhibition games involving touring teams and the State Allstar team that will provide resources the State Associaion can apply to the further development of the game.

Future Aims

- 1. To organize a State Youth Soccer Association, separate from the senior body and affiliated with the USSFA.
- 2. To work very close with the youth leagues, schools and colleges and encourage American teams into the senior ranks.
- 3. Encourage teams to drop ethnic identity and to infiltrate their lineups with American players.
- 4. Encourage managers to contact their towns to initiate a soccer program, join the youth leagues and to create a link between the youth and senior teams.
- 5. Think positively in elevating soccer to a major U.S. sport. Concentrate on projecting a non-violent, fast moving and high scoring type of game. Concentrate on good sportsmanship.
- 6. To work closely with USSFA and participate in their programs.
- 7. To maintain good relationships between the M.S.A. and Referees Association.
- 8. To provide coaching clinics, soccer lectures, movies, soccer equipment, exhibition games and better publicity.

SOCCER in Michigan in 1972 witnessed the 50th anniversary of the Detroit Soccer League. To commemorate its golden anniversary, the league, under President Bert Martin, held a series of events. The first was a gala picnic in July at Slovak Park where soccer old-timers met the now active players. In November a banquet was held at the PNA Hall to officially celebrate fifty years of soccer in the Motor City.

As part of the anniversary activities the Detroit League All Stars played five games. Their record for the year was three wins, one tie and one loss. Their tie was a 3-3 decision against the University of Munich in October. They gained two wins over the Western Michigan All-Stars and split two games with the Ohio-Indiana All-Stars.

The Carpathia Kickers easily captured the championship of the Detroit Soccer League. Although they did not have a spotless record, their losses came after they had gained the crown. Their premier rival in the last few years, the Serbian S.C., joined the American Soccer League as the Detroit Mustangs and did not participate in local competition.

In both sections of the Second Division, the battle for top spot went down to the final playing date. Dacia emerged on top in the East section while the British-Americans gained first place in the West. In the play-off between these two teams, Dacia emerged as winner of the Division by ekeing out a 1-0 victory. Both clubs, however, gained places in the First Division for 1973.

In the Michigan State Cup, the Kickers gained their usual double by defeating the Sport Club 1-0.

The Western Michigan Soccer League with new President Bill Fredericks, started the 1972 season with 10 teams, the highest membership in its 13 years of existence. At the end only eight clubs were left. The Grand Rapids Comets were suspended during the season while the other furniture city entry, the Grand Rapids Flashers, failed to appear for its scheduled game. The championship of the Western Michigan Soccer League went to the Kalamazoo Internationals which came on strong in the second half of the season. The Lansing Coral Gables were a strong runner-up.

The Western League All-Stars engaged in four contests. Their record ended in a split with two wins and two losses. Both of the victories were over the neighboring Northwest Indiana All-Stars while both defeats came at the hands of Detroit.

The governing group in Michigan changed its official name to the Michigan State Soccer Association. President Donald A. Edwards was re-elected to a third consecutive term as president.

The Michigan State Soccer Association and the Detroit League are now negotiating with the City of Detroit to have a facility devoted solely for the use of the game. Soccer in its 50 years, has played in many fields and parks in the Motor City. A permanent place should assist in the promotion of the sport.

A new senior league, the Central Michigan Soccer League, is now being formed in the Bay City, Saginaw, Flint area. At least six teams will start the new season.

Youth soccer is making steady progress in the Wolverine State. The Greater Detroit Soccer League gained six new teams in 1972. In the western part of the state, five Western Michigan Soccer League clubs now have youth elevens. Michigan does not lack or boys to play the game. The real need is for good coaches.

Soccer promoter Willie DeWald, gain staged two international contests n Detroit. Both games ended in financial loss and unless the climate for these exhibitions changes, Detroiters may see very few foreign teams in the forthcoming future.

More progress in all phases of soccer is expected in the forthcoming year of 1973.

popularity in great strides, and is eing more and more recognized by ll groups of the general population. till very few however, are involved a the actual promotional and organizational phase of soccer programs. To naintain the interest among the perpose presently involved, serious efforts ave to be exercised to recruit more nanpower for this great cause.

During the 1972 season, the Minn. occer Football League (MSFL) todie alled 22 teams. The Annual Opening in the league ournament held in Duluth in May not sponsored by the Duluth Club ets, was taken by the host by beating in the Mpls Andinos in the final. By taking the Annual Wilson Cup crown for the third consecutive season, the Mpls. tickers took full possession of the tophy. The Kickers squeezed through tight finale, ending in a 3:2 victory law yer the Dundees.

The young St. Louis Park 2nd dission team, the Cardinals, outlasted renty two opponents and deservedly ok the Minnesota Cup honors.

Organized by the Mpls. Kickers, in poor of the past MSA president, Mr. gfried Satzinger, the first Annual tzinger Invitational Tournament was tald between F.C. Germania (Winn, situanada), Save-Way United (Port Arteri) ur, Canada), Mpls. Kickers and Dundir es; the latter taking the win.

In Indoor Invitational Tournaments

Eau Claire, Wisc., and White Bear

Lake, Minn., the Mpls. Dundees and Mpls. Kickers took the honors respectively.

During their 20th Anniversary, the St. Paul Soccer Club hosted Frei Turnerschaft of Braunschweig, Germany, for an exciting two day tournament. Scores were: Frei Turnerschaft vs. Blackhawks 3:1, aggregate USC-Kickers vs. Frei Turnerschaft 2:5, and the Falcons vs. Dukes 1:6.

The Minn. Soccer Referees Ass'n. (MSRA) in its fourth year, continues to flourish in several capacities, including further improvement of caliber refereeing, coordination of referee clinics and recruiting programs, etc. Mr. Roy Evans, reelected as President of the MSRA for the 1973 season, has surpassed his commitments in many ways and deserves great mention. Vice-President Mr. Aage Refsgaard also reelected, acted in his position with important support to all MSRA programs. The MSRA has presently 18 USSFA registered and 32 NCAA certified referees, and has this year joined the British Referees Ass'n.. Overseas Div.

The Minn. State High School League has continued to expand in an unprecedented fashion mainly due to the people directly involved. Of great significance too, has been the contribution of youth soccer programs and the encouragement given by several senior amateur clubs to high school boys to continue the sport. Although several persons within the high school programs deserve great tribute for their work, Mr. Rudi Martignacco stands out for his effort in leading his school team, Richfield, to the championship of the Lake Conference. Mr. Martignacco is doing promotional and organizational work within youth activities as well.

In the MISSL high school league Blake took the overall honors by beating Cretin.

The Suburban Conference overall championship was captured by Mounds View.

In college competitions, Gustavus again recaptured the crown in the MIAC, followed by close contenders Augsburg and St. Thomas.

Bethany Jr. College took the title in the SMSC, with St. Paul Bible, Pillsbury, and Concordia placing next in sequence.

The Minn. Junior Soccer League continued its endeavors to promote summer league programs, this season consisting of four developmental and two junior divisions and one elementary. Many efforts go into these programs and the persons involved are highly commended.

The fourth fall youth soccer program, organized by the Bloomington Athletic Ass'n., again completed a successful season with over 500 boys and 150 girls in the age group 9 to 16 years participating.

For their support and dedication for the furthering of soccer in the past 15 to 20 years, Mr. Joe Lamers (player-coach-manager), St. Paul Soccer Club, Mr. Harry Tietz (player-organizer), Mpls. Kickers, Mr. Pete Goerges (player-organizer) Mpls. Kickers, Mr. Richard Tyrpa (player-organizer), Mpls. Polonia, deserve great tribute and have gained great admiration among the Minnesota soccer enthusiasts.

MISSOURI

MISSOURI'S success story in soccer continues to grow. This past season could be considered the best in 87 years that soccer has been played in St. Louis. We can't help boasting about the 5 National titles that were won plus our professional St. Louis Soccer Stars coming in second in the NASL Championship playoffs. While we are proud of the National titles won last season we are equally proud of the progress and development of soccer in our four leagues.

The Khoury Soccer Association with Jim Moore and Dan Seady at the helm, completed its 22nd year and the L & L soccer club won the Senior Championship. The Metro soccer league is headed by Walter Giesler and has the distinction of having the National Junior Cup Championship team, Seco soccer club, win their league and go on to repeat as National Champions. Larry May soccer club was the winner of the Metro's Senior Division. The St. Louis league is guided by Joe Numi and Earl Doggendorf. Earl is also chairman of our State Association. The St. Louis league was composed of seven senior teams that were divided into two divisions. The Stag's soccer league team managed by Sal Noto, was the league's 1st half winner, overall league champion and "Marre" Champions. The Busch Gardens soccer team, managed by Henry Kuster was league 2nd half winner, and National Amateur Champions. The Kutis soccer team,

NEW HAMPSHIRE

SOCCER has enjoyed a long tradition in New Hampshire sports history, that dates back to the eighteen eighties, when Manchester and many other Granite State communities were thriving textile manufacturing centers.

In those days most of the players were recent immigrants from the British Isles, who were finding new opportunities for recreation with the establishment of the Saturday half day holiday in the textile industry. As early as 1888 found a soccer team, representing Manchester.

The formation of the USSFA in 1913 found the Manchester Light Blues, playing in the Merrimac Valley League, an affiliate of the newly organized Northern Massachusetts and New Hampshire State Association. Later in the nineteen twenties both Manchester and New Market were members of the old Bay State League.

Several efforts were made to establish leagues in New Hampshire but none were successful until the New Hampshire Conference emerged as the catalyst to harness the potential available from the college and school ranks of the state. It has created a new interest in club soccer, where players can further the soccer skills and techniques acquired at school.

The Conference came into being in 1971 with sixteen teams, competing in two statewide divisions. In 1972 the membership increased to twenty-four clubs in four geographically arranged divisions. With the tremendous interest developed over the past two years it is planned to group more than thirty teams in five divisions for the 1973 season.

The Referees' Association is headed by Sam Allen of Manchester with Warren Bouchard of Lancaster as secretary.

More than sixty teams competed in the four divisions of the New Hampshire High School League. White Mountain Regional High School from the Lancaster District won the State championship in the play-offs at Hudson, N.H.

An interesting aspect of New Hampshire Conference soccer is the fact that ninety percent of the players and referees are homebred American born. Soccer is a booming sport in New Hampshire.

NORTH TEXAS

SINCE soccer first came to North Texas several years ago, the game has attracted thousands of players and hundreds of others interested in making a contribution to its development. Every year there is further growth, more enthusiasm; each season brings new Associations from cities all over the area. More coaches are introduced to the game, more referees are trained, and more fathers look nostalgically at their well worn baseball mitt as their sons chase a large black and white ball around the park.

Hard figures may be more convincing than mere rhetoric, however. In North Texas, there are more than ten thousand registered juvenile players, and most estimates give a figure of twenty five thousand for the number of actual participants. Certainly, on the opening night of the Dallas Tornado 1973 season, of more than nineteen thousand spectators eleven or twelve thousand were dressed in the colors of their own particular team.

The example of Plano best illustrates how quickly the game can capture the enthusiasm of a city. In the fall of 1972, the Plano Sports Authority took on the sponsorship of the Plano High School team. Thirty students came forward, twenty made up the eventual team and were successful enough to reach the regional playoffs. So great was the interest in the city that in February 1973 a call went out for teams for boys. In March the new league started with fifty seven teams and nine hundred players registered! This is a city whose most active program until that time had been baseball with a mere five hundred boys involved.

Similar developments are occurring throughout North Texas, Wichita Falls has a boys soccer program, and Texarkana, Fort Stockton, Austin, Waxahachie, Lubbock, Rockwall and Tyler, too now sit in the shade of the great soccer umbrella. In the fall of 1972, high schools of Dallas and the immediate area ran a club soccer program which produced almost forty teams, tremendous competition, and raised the eyebrows of the schools athletic departments.

Other indications of progress can be seen: the North Texas Soccer Football Referees Association which a few years ago consisted of fifteen members now trains one hundred referees every year and membership has stabilized at about two hundred fifty, making it the largest Referees Association in the country. the penalty area, and several of the twenty one Associations in North Texas have started soccer activities for girls.

The teams in North Texas are dominating soccer in the state. In the spring of 1973, official state championships were held for four age brackets, with the Senior (men's) championship yet to be decided. The Bantam team, the Bowie Bombers from Dallas North Soccer Association and coached by Roland Kalmbach, shared state title when their 0-0 tie game could not be completed because of the weather. The remaining North Texas teams swept the board. The Colts, coached by Bob Pendley, won the Freshman Division 3-1; the Pirates, coached by Bob Whitmer, easily took the Sophomore championship 6-0, and the Junior representative, America International coached by David Carrera, trounced the Houston opponent 7-1.

The America International team has reached the final rounds of the National Junior Challenge Cup competition, to be played in Dallas in June so that particular victory was no surprise. After a hard local schedule, the team defeated opponents from Georgia and Florida 4-1 and 2-0, respectively, and now faces stern opposition from San Diego, St. Louis and Maryland for the championship.

The Senior representative, the Dallas Rangers, will attempt three in a row against opposition from Houston after last year's convincing victory over Houston Mexico 4-2 and 4-0, and the 1-0 victory for the championship the year before. The team won the title of the newly formed Southwest Soccer Association and again must be the team to beat for supremacy in Texas soccer in 1973.

As a result of local enthusiasm for high school soccer the 1973-74 season will see both Fort Worth and Dallas with officially recognized varsity soccer programs. In the summer of 1972, the North Texas High School All Stars went on tour to Europe winning five of eight games against tough opposition there. To finance the trip, the players themselves sold thousands of donuts, washed hundreds of cars and participated in several money raising exhibition games. The summer of 1973 will see another group of all stars make the same effort, the same trip with even greater success. The final game of the high school program in the fall of 1972 involved Thomas Jefferson of Dallas and Richardson High School. It proved to be an exciting cliff hanger eventually decided on penalty kicks. The local Associations also produced one All American.

The college championship was won by the University of Texas, which retained its Governor's Cup by proving too strong for the other playoff teams, Texas Tech, University of Texas at Arlington and Trinity. The pressure from new students in many of the smaller schools insures that major competition in the colleges is here permanently.

The professional scene is occupied by the Dallas Tornado, and the game draws bigger crowds every year. Over 24,000 saw the Tornado and Moscow Dynamo play to a tremendously thrilling 0-0 stand off at the end of the 1972 season. Nineteen thousand watched the opening game of this season and saw Kyle Rote, Jr., a local product, open the seasons scoring with a goal against Toronto.

There is no doubt that soccer is in North Texas to stay. The game has captured the imagination of the parents, occupies the feet of the kids, and has produced its first home grown professional player. What more evidence is needed to convince everyone that North Texas is truly one of the major

OREGON

THE 1972-73 season was a time of growth for junior soccer in Oregon.

The formation of the Rockwood Junior Soccer League, in the Portland area, is a good example of this. Organized in August, 1972, it now boasts 317 players, comprising 18 teams in five age divisions with 2 of these teams winning district titles, qualifying them for play in the state tournament.

In April, 1973, the Rockwood group formed the Mt. Hood Junior Soccer Association and the Rockwood Junior Soccer Club with hopes of having three additional clubs formed from the surrounding area by the fall of this year. These clubs will participate in organized competition under the banner of the Association. This move is expected to double the number of teams in this area. Through the efforts of the many dedicated people involved, this program will succeed.

1971 marked the organizing of another club. The Forest Grove Soccer Club was formed in support of the champion 11 yr. old team from that area. The club has now grown to 130 players making up 7 teams in 3 divisions, with a projected increase to at least double that amount.

The Columbia Junior Soccer League, formed in 1969, now comprises 16 teams in 2 divisions, with 169 players.

Other areas in the state such as Eugene, Grants Pass, Klamath Falls, and Ashland all have soccer programs involving many boys in the sport.

In looking back over the major developments of the last year in junior soccer, and the predictions for the future, it looks as if Oregon has arrived.

Whilst still on Junior Soccer, it was Oregon's privilege, in 1972, to host the Pacific Coast Junior Tournament. This is an annual event involving teams from California, Washington, British Columbia and Oregon. The division one (under 18s) trophy was won by Olsen's United of Washington, defeating Richmond Wanderers, British Columbia, 3-2. In division six (under 12s), Norpoint Royals, also of Washington, won the Trophy by defeating Ballistic United of California 1-0. The Secretary of State for Oregon, the Hon. Clay Myres, was kind enough to accept our invitation to attend the Tournament and present the Trophy to the division one winners. The division six Trophy was presented by the former Lt. Governor of British Columbia, the Hon. George Pearkes, after whom the Trophy was named.

In the High Schools soccer grows every year, and although these teams are not affiliated with the State Association, greater effort is being made to have these teams affiliate and enter our State Competitions.

The Junior State Championships were held in May in Eugene, and the various District Champions will be competing in all age groups. The Division 1 and Division 6 winners will be competing for Oregon in the forthcoming Pacific Coast Tournament, this year to be held in California.

In senior soccer, the Willamette League again opened is season with 15 teams, 8 in the Northern Division and 7 in the Southern Division. The Division Champions for 1972-73 are the Portland Thunderbirds and the Southern Champions are Salem Kickers. These teams will compete for the Title of "Willamette League Champions." In the Portland League, Germania again won the League Title, beating St. Patrick's in the play off, 4-3. In addition, Germania also took the Bennett Cup and are current holders of the Johnston Trophy. Portland Americans defeated Germania in the Final of the Cameron Cup preventing a clean sweep by Germania. In addition, Germania are the current Oregon-Washington Champions. This is an annual event whereby the respective State Champions play off for the Title.

Oregon will host this year's event and are hoping to retain the Title.

As Secretary of the State Association, I was privileged, along with Bernie Rilatt, Chairman of our Referees Association, to attend a Trophy evening held by the Portland Thunderbirds, and present the Trophies to the individual players of the team. These trophies are keenly sought after by the players and it's the players themselves who, by voting, decide on the winners of the trophies. They are awarded for the most valuable player, most sporting and most improved player. This type of Club activity I feel can only help to foster team spirit.

We are hoping to arrange two new Tournaments this year, to be held in Portland during the summer and if successful they will become an annual event. First will be an Invitational Tournament to be held during the Portland Rose Festival Week. The second will be a five-a-side Tournament which will be open to all Oregon teams.

Publicity for Soccer is, I am happy to say, gaining ground in Oregon. Frequent coverage of games by television and better write ups are now appearing in the press. We have a long way to go before we get the amount of coverage we would like, but with men like George Jenkins, our Publicity Director, I don't think it will be too long before we are getting the coverage.

At our last A.G.M. tributes were paid to Mr. Forest Udy, for his many years of devoted service to the game of Soccer in this State. Even now, at the age of 75, he still participates in Soccer by managing a team in the Willamette League. He himself started playing Soccer in 1917 and since hanging up his boots he has devoted his time to fostering and promoting Soccer in Oregon.

In closing, The State of Oregon ould like to offer its sincere contatulations to the United States Olymc Soccer Team for its fine achieveent of qualifying for the finals of last year's Olympics. Let us hope that in the not too distant future we become the Olympic Champions.

Two new Junior groups have been ormed one in the Poughkeepsie area nd the Mid-Hudson Junior League in ne Kingston area. The Italian-Amerian Soccer League is also starting a unior program and the Long Island egaue as well. The German-American eague and the Italian American eague staged successful Indoor tournments, with the final day of the German-American League tournament rawing over 2000 spectators.

Ferman-American League

The League was started in 1923 by small group of immigrants from Gerany. However when the pattern of nmigration changed, other ethnic roups were welcomed into the league. As the result the league has grown oth in size and stature. Now clubs om four states are participating: New ork, New Jersey, Connecticut and ennsylvania.

This year 40 clubs with over 160 teams are playing, and over 4000 players were registered.

Since 1960 a member of our league has won the National Open Challenge Cup 12 out of the 13 years.

The League All Star team over the years has shown to be the best in the country and has consistently been able to win matches against International Opponents, only last year we were able to beat the German Major Division team of Stuttgart in their only New York appearance.

The Sport Club Elizabeth (the 1972 National Open winner), won the Major Division playoff for the Harry Kraus Memorial Trophy and the German-Hungarian S.C. won the 1973 Indoor Classic, this year sponsored by Schenley Affiliated Brands.

Most of our All Star team will play with the New York Cosmos and hope to repeat their League Championship.

Since starting a midget division, our Junior league has had the biggest increase in that age group (8 to 10) and the outlook is bright for bringing more and more youngsters and hopefully their parents to our games.

On October 27, 1973 the German-American Football Association will celebrate its 50th Anniversary with a Gala Banquet in Schuetzenpark, North Bergen, N.J.

has 20 amateur clubs divided into two divisions. Ten of the clubs have Junior teams, and the League also has Juvenile, Boys and Midget teams with outside affiliations. Our regular schedule extends from September to June and includes USSFA and SNYSSA Cup games, but during the summer months our clubs are kept active by competing for the National League Challenge Cup. Every club entering the League must have a clubhouse and elected officers. Three hundred sixty Amateur and one hundred eighty Junior players are registered with the League, and member clubs have a total membership between four and five thousand. A member of the Southern New York State Soccer Association, the League is affilitaed with the United States Soccer Football Association and the Federation Internationale de Football Association.

Participation by member clubs in inter-league competition has brought credit to the National League. In 1971-72 Istria S.C. continued the League's successes in the Dr. Manning Cup by winning N.Y. State's highest trophy, while Club Espana and S.C.

Gjoa were runners-up in the Knicker-bocker Cup and the New York State section of the National Amateur Challenge Cup respectively. This season two League teams, Istria and Palermo F.C., will be in the semi-final round of the Dr. Manning Cup. The later club recently won the Italian-American League's mammoth indoor tournament when they convincingly defeated the top German-American League entry, the German-Hungarians, 4-1 in the final.

But this bright season of continuing growth has been dimmed by the death of William Andersen. A member of the USSFA Hall of Fame, Willie's career covered many years as player, manager and official. All soccer feels his loss, but no organization quite so directly as the National League. For the League to a considerable degree owes its very existence to his tireless efforts and flinty integrity. A founder and fourteen-time President of the League, Willie never stopped working for soccer, and was, at his death, both League Registrar and First Vice President.

TENNESSEE

MEMPHIS, Tennessee is the center of Association Soccer in Tennessee. The South East Memphis Soccer Association (SEMSA), is the initiator and prime mover of the Tennessee State Soccer Association.

The SEMSA League promotes play in the Juvenile and Junior Divisions. Our Juvenile League is Sub-divided into Pee Wee, Midget, Freshman, and Sophomore age groups. The Junior Division is limited in team participation at this time. Competition for the Junior League schools is often supplied by private schools throughout the Tennessee region. There are thirty-five boys registered in SEMSA, and one hundred and twenty players not affiliated at this time in the Junior Division. There are one hundred players affiliated with the State Association in an Adult Amateur Division, and three hundred and fifty players in the Juvenile Division. Two hundred and fifty boys participate in the Kingsport, Tennessee Boy's Club soccer program in East Tennessee, who are not affiliated with the State Association at present.

The 1971-1972 leading teams in the SEMSA Leagues were as follows:

Pee Wee Division—ages 5 to 7—Pee Wee Patriots, coached by Randall Lay. Midget Division—ages 8 to 9—Red Raiders, coached by Jim Payne.

Freshman Division—ages 10 to 12—Blue Colts, coached by Sepp Huber.

Sophomore Division—ages 13 to 15— Red Patriots, coached by Doyle Davis. Junior Division—ages 16 to 18— Wooddale Patriots, coached by Lee Miller.

Adult Amateur Division-Memphis Butterflies, coached by Edwardo Piecrahita.

Upon completing the 1972-1973 season, the South East Memphis Soccer Association League division winners were as follows:

Pee Wee Division—ages 5 to 7—Pee Wee Patriots, coached by Ronald Davis Midget Division—ages 8 to 9—Mean Greens, coached by Jim Blackburn.

Freshman Division—ages 10 to 12—Red Chargers, coached by Hans Bermel Sophomore Division—ages 13 to 15—Blue Falcons, coached by Ed Longinetti Junior Division—ages 16 to 18—Germantown, coached by Lee Miller

Adult Amateur Division-Memphis Butterflies, coached by Edwardo Piecrahita

During the 1972-1973 season a State Referee Association and a State Coaches Association were formed. There are eight registered referees to date, and others are being trained. A professional exhibition soccer match between two NASL teams is scheduled in Memphis for the month of May, 1973, in conjunction with the annual Cotton Carnival. The game is promoted by Memphis Sports, Inc. Five years ago, no organized soccer existed in Memphis. Today, due to the effort of a small group of enthusiasts, it rivals other sports for popularity.

WASHINGTON

CONTINUOUS change and con-stant progress sums up the year for the Evergreen State of Washington! Until last year the State Senior League and the Washington State Soccer Football Association were one and the same body. With the mushrooming growth of soccer here in recent years it was obvious that restructuring was necessary and that the WSSFA had to be established as an independent body. Tom Webb was elected as president of the WSSFA under the new concept with Dan Baines as vice-president, Jack Mickelberry as secretarytreasurer and a new State Commission was elected consisting of Ted Kanyo, Dave Cooke, Robin Chalmers and Denzil Miskell. Hall of Famer Ed Craggs was named as a lifetime honorary commissioner.

The Washington Senior League was formed as a separate entity with Mike Ryan as Commissioner, Ed Serrin and Ted Kanyo as vice-presidents and a working committee of Denzil Miskell, George Broady, Robin Chalmers and Dave Cooke. In addition to the Senior League, the Washington State Junior Soccer Association, the Northwest Collegiate League, the Catholic Youth Organization League, the Metro High School League and others operate independently but all within the overall structure of and affiliated with the WSSFA.

Referees' Association

The Washington Referees' Association came of age last year with a concerted effort to organize and expand their ranks. Many clinics were conducted and a lot of credit for the licensing down to the junior level of almost 300 soccer referees must go to Doug Howard, president, George "Whitey" Craggs, Sid Ryles, Al Corey, Dick Ohara and many others who worked so hard for the betterment of soccer.

Senior League

Twenty-four teams entered the senior league for 1972-73, giving the loop more teams than it has had since pre-World War II days. The Rainier Brewers won their second successive State Championship in an 8-7 penalty kicks after overtime victory over the Seattle Heidelbergs a Seattle High School Memorial Stadium on April 22, 1973. Other outstanding teams this past season were the Olympia Olys, 1973 Pacific Goal Cup winners, Seattle Falcons, Boeing Employees and Mr. Pro Soccer Shoes. About 60 per cent of the players in the 1972-73 league were under 23 years of age and an even larger percentage were American-born!

All of Washington's senior entries in national competition were eliminated early this year, but their opposition will testify that both the Olympia Olys and the Seattle Heidelbergs showed their mettle. Washington has never done patricularly well in past national competition but in the next year or two, lookout!

In an attempt to provide better soccer and better viewing for the fans during the wet winter months, the Washington Senior League experimented by playing on the astroturf at Seattle High School Memorial Stadium. It was an artistic success but a financial flop. Robin Chalmers, fields chairman, is not giving up! "Next year", says Chalmers, "We'll play the grass fields from September thru early December and in late February and March. In the bad weather months, we'll discontinue play altogether and we'll have another go at Memorial Stadium in April." The Washington seniors provide an exciting brand of soccer and this past year's competition proved that any one of the top six teams could defeat any one of the others on a given day. With more and more young talent coming to the fore, the seniors can look forward to a bright future.

An Under-23 team was formed for the first time this year, sponsored by the Senior League, and a fine team it is, but the big problem lies in finding suitable competition. Ed Serrin is the coordinator with Ted Kanyo the manager, Bobby Hough, head coach and Bill Logie and Dennis Sloan, assistant coaches.

The 34th annual Washington Five-A-Side Tournament was played in late April, 1972 with the usual 32 team entries including some classy Canadian sides. The Olympia Olys won the marathon event. In other 1972 action, the Rainier Brewers won the league playoff, emblematic of the State Championship.

Soccer Development at Work

The Washington Soccer Development Committee under Jack Mickelberry has been hard at work principally in sponsoring clinics. In 1972, the Development Committee sponsored and ran the Jack Charlton Clinic which again was a tremendous success. This clinic was first made possible in 1971 by Joe Smith of Washington and Harry Christie of British Columbia through the good offices of the Mitre Company. Several hundreds of boys participated in this week-long clinic which had two sessions per day. At Auburn, the Auburn Soccer Club sponsored another clinic which had almost 200 attendees. This clinic featured George Murray and Ian Taylor of the Aberdeen (Scotland) Dons. Bill Logie arranged this clinic with the kind permission of his friend Jimmy Bonthrone and the Aberdeen Football Club.

Since Jack Charlton did not plan to return this year, the Development Committee naturally turned to Bill Logic for help in obtaining the coaches who were so enthusiastically received at Auburn last year. Bill not only obtained the services of Murray and Taylor, but contracted for Bobby Clark, Scottish international goalie, into the bargain! The trio will conduct a clinic for more than 400 boys here in June.

The Development Committee also worked hard on the Aberdeen versus Wolverhampton Wanderers game, the Maccabbees versus British Columbia game and the Sandt, Vienna series.

Washington hosted Aberdeen, Wolverhampton, Club Maccabbee of Israel and the Sandt Club of Vienna last year. The Dons versus Wolverhampton game pulled in around 6,000 fans, somewhat disappointing to the Development Committee. Even more disappointing was the showing for the Maccabbee game, sponsor Johnny Haas losing a bundle. Haas' other promotion, the visit of Sandt was more successful. Sandt lost its one touring game to the youthful Seattle Heidelbergs, comprised mainly of University of Washington players and ex-junior players.

The College Scene

On the college scene, the Northwest Collegiate League operated successfully and there was close competition for the title between the University of Washington and Seattle Pacific with the U. of W. winning out this year. The Husky Classic was a great success in its initial year with almost 8000 fans attending the three-day affair. Eight colleges competed including U.C.L.A., California, San Jose State and Chico State, Western Washington, Seattle Pacific, Seattle University and the host Washington Huskies. San Jose State took home the honors.

Making this the biggest college year ever in Washington, St. Louis, Cal State, Fullerton and Simon Fraser of British Columbia all visited. Bigger and better things are expected in 1973 with Mike Ryan and Cliff McCrath the chief architects aided by the forward-looking Athletic Director of the University of Washington, Joe Kearney. The Huskies of Washington and the Falcons of Seattle Pacific both tied the NCAA champions St. Louis Billikens here. We were proud of that and tickled to see the Billikens win the NCAA crown, not only because it made us look good, but because Harry Keogh's boys are all home-grown!

The high schools proved disappointing as only the Seattle Metro League operated soccer on a fully-recognized basis. Next year, Tacoma High Schools will play soccer in fully-fledged competition. Many other high schools are playing soccer but volunteer adults and the kids themselves organize the games, prepare the fields for play and pay all of the expenses. This, of course, is admirable but it is shameful that the school districts cannot see fit to adopt soccer as an official sport on the same level as, say, baseball which is a nonrevenue sport which costs a bundle. We are working on the problem and are hopeful that some headway will be made next year.

The Juniors

As in every year since 1961, the Junior Association (1972-73 president Karl Grosch) is making great gains. Eight hundred and eighty-nine boys teams and 120 girls teams registered this year with the junior body. The now famous Canadian Exchange program ran into a hitch this year as the timing was changed from Spring to Fall in the hope of getting better Communication problems weather. were cited as the cause of many Washington teams not being matched. This will be corrected in the Fall of 1973 and a minimum of 700 teams from each side will participate which will mean an involvement of almost 23,000 kids! It is estimated that about $1,-500,000 changes hands during the three weekends of play! A new area was explored this year as an exchange program was begun with 14 teams from Oregon. This program is expected to show a rapid increase and is also expected to stimulate soccer growth in the Webfoot State.

Competitions at every age level, one year apart, were held for beys this year and a State girls championship was held with four age groupings. Miss Junior Soccer was named for the first time in 1972 and the inaugural title-holder was lovely Miss Cheryl Parks of Federal Way, aged 15. Her successor is Miss Jan McCaughan of Tacoma, also aged 15. Both are soccer players.

In the 1971-72 season, Washington won both of the Pacific Coast championships held in Portland, Oregon. Teams from Oregon, California, British Columbia and Washington participated in the Under-12 and Under-18

Divisions. Tacoma's Norpoint Royals under coach John Duggan won the Under-12 title and with it the newlydonated General Pearkes Trophy. The General is a Victoria Cross winner, a great soccer fan and a most respected gentleman from British Columbia.

Bellevue's Olsen's United under coach Dick Valore won the Under-18 title and with it the Governor Ronald Reagan Trophy.

That's soccer in the Evergreen State. Soccer is coming of age in America—played by and excelled in by American boys! As soccer is on the march all over the United States, so it is in Washington. The state of soccer in the State of Washington is GOOD and getting better all the time!

We would like to give mention to our three referees who have been officiating for many years. Jack McCahill first affiliated with the United States Soccer Assn. in 1938 as a referee. He has refereed high school, college, for the West Penn Referees, and grade school. Jack has refereed many National Cup games locally and away. In between he has been a college coach, managed the Heidelberg senior team and then has come back to referee soccer. He is still active refereeing juvenile, intermediate, junior and senior games.

Jack Ramous became a referee in 1942. Jack has been president of the West Penn Referees Assn. for many years. He has always been available. He was in the American Midwest Summer League. Before becoming a referee he played soccer. He is still active in all phases of the sport and has a full schedule of refereeing.

Jack McCahill and Jack Ramous were also players before becoming referees.

WISCONSIN

A CCORDING to the Gallup Poll, growth in both interest and participation in soccer football is the most significant among twelve spectator sports polled—an increase of from 1 per cent to 13 per cent since 1959. Wisconsin is going right along with the trend and shows a tremendous growth in youth soccer in the northern regions of the state, as well as on the public high school level. The "soccer mania" has spread to development of girls teams and expansion of collegiate soccer.

Soccer has been accepted as a recognized school sport in the Milwaukee Public High Schools as of the fall of 1973. Formerly the league was run on a club basis. The Wisconsin private high schools are still going strong with eleven schools participating. The public high schools will be coming in with 14 area schools.

Selections to the Olympic and National teams have brought prominence to Wisconsin players. Three Major league players were a part of the Olympic squad: John Bocwinski (Schlitz/Polonia); Horst Stemke (Brewers/UW-Green Bay); and Walter Ziaja (Pabst Blue Ribbons). Ziaja was also chosen for the National team touring part of Europe in March and April of '73.

The Wisconsin Soccer Association elected a new president after John Zussman stepped down after completing a two year term. President Mike Kabanica was a former director and Games Commissioner of the WSA. Other directors elected to the board are: Tony Ansems, Louis De La Pasqua, Bernie Henrichs, Eugene Kucha, Miss Cel Krzych, Robert Mott, Gray Perret, and Henry Wawrzyniak. Frank Markus was elected USSFA delegate.

President Kabanica also appointed an Advisory Committee consisting of two past president of the WSA... Gene Edwards and John Zussman... and Attorney Ted Wedemeyer, Jr.

The referee's school was again held under the direction of FIFA Referee Mike Wuertz. A coaching clinic conducted by USSFA coaches touring the country is planned for August 5-11. With the rapid growth in all levels of soccer in Wisconsin, prime consideration is being given to readying and improving techniques of instruction in order to keep up with the demand of those impatient young athletes who are discovering soccer is their game.

(In the First Division championship playoff, the Capitol Div. champions, the Madison 56ers, defeated the So. Milw. Albanians 4-1, to become First Division champion of the state, with the option to go up to the Major Division. Madison declined, however, citing travelling problems, since all Major games are held in the Milwaukee area. The W.S.A. selected Club Latino to enter the Major Division, because they have already established junior division teams, which are a requirement for a Major team.)
